Harold J. Katteelman, bankrupt stock and bond broker, was ordered committed to Pike County Jail at Bowling Green, Mo., by Federal Judge George H. Moore today, for contempt of court in failing to turn over $39,000 cash, with books and records of the H. J. Katteelman Co., to William S. Madden, receiver, as he had been previously directed by the court to do.

Judge Moore's order directed that Katteelman remain in custody of the United States Marshal, in jail at Bowling Green until he complies with the court's instructions.

Detained by Marshal.
Katteelman was placed temporarily in the cellroom of the Marshal's Office. Marshal William B. Fahy said he planned to hold Katteelman in St. Louis City Jail until Friday. On that day, Katteelman is scheduled to answer another contempt citation, also before Judge Moore, based on his failure to furnish a list of creditors and schedule of assets.

The prisoner's counsel said an attempt would be made to get the United States Circuit Court of Appeals to consider an appeal from Judge Moore's order, and that if such an appeal were denied, application would be made to the Court of Appeals for a writ of habeas corpus, for the prisoner's release.

One of Katteelman's lawyers, Patrick H. Cullen, recently petitioned the United States Supreme Court to take up the case on a writ of certiorari, but the Supreme Court Monday refused to do so. The writ of Appeals had previously denied an appeal from Judge Moore's order citing Katteelman to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt.

Court Denies Delay.
Cullen, leaving a trial in which he was engaged in the Municipal Courts Building, went before Judge Moore today to ask for further time. He argued briefly to the effect that the records which Katteelman was directed to furnish might be used as evidence against him, and hence that the order to produce records violated his constitutional rights. He argued also that Morris Levin, chosen by the creditors as trustee, and not Receiver Madden, named by the Court, was the person to whom assets should be turned over. He asked that the case be passed until tomorrow.

"We'll try the matter right now," rejoined Judge Moore. When Cullen protested, the Judge replied that Cullen and his associate counsel, C. F. Storeman, had stated that, if the Supreme Court should refuse the application for a writ of certiorari, they would admit that Katteelman had not complied with the Court's order.

Madden was placed on the witness stand, and testified that he had not received the assets and records mentioned in the Court's order. Judge Moore then issued the order for commitment of Katteelman, the order having been prepared by Harry Barker, counsel for the receiver.

A. P. PALMER PLEADS GUILTY
OF THREATENING PRESIDENTSentencing of Retired New York Engineer, Who Sent Letters, Deferred Until Jan. 24.

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Austin Phelps Palmer, the retired engineer who was indicted yesterday by a Federal grand jury on charges of sending threatening letters to President Roosevelt, pleaded guilty in Federal District Court today. He will be sentenced Jan. 24.

The pleading of the Park avenue resident, an elderly man who attempted to destroy his business, was purely routine. Through his attorney, George Gordon Battle, Palmer told the Court he was guilty of sending the letters, as charged in the two counts of the indictment. He is liable to five years' imprisonment and a $1000 fine on each count.

Palmer was arrested last Saturday. One of the letters he was charged with dispatching threatened bodily harm to the President.

G. O. P. Ridicules New Deal
In Series of Radio SkitsBroadcasts Attack on "Regimentation," "Excessive Taxation" and Crop Control From Chicago Station.

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, Jan. 15.—The first of the Republican party's dramatized political programs was broadcast over radio station WGN last night. For a half hour, thrusts at "regimentation," "excessive taxation," crop control, the national debt and New Deal undertakings—interspersed with martial music and dramatic skits—went over the air. The announced purpose of the innovation in the inter-party warfare was "to bring home the ill effect of the Government's policies on your life and mine."

Roosevelt Quoted.
Franklin D. Roosevelt was quoted as stating in his 1932 campaign: "Stop the deficits."
An announcer said the administration's expenditures resulted in a $3,575,000,000 deficit on June 30, 1935; that the New Deal is spending $1.95 for each $1 collected; that the public debt totals $30,534,000,000. John Smith and Mary Jones appeared at a marriage license bureau. After routine questions, the clerk inquired:
"Do you know the national debt has a prior lien on everything you own?" The average man must pay $4.60 a week to the Government," Smith, making only $22.50 a week, decided not to marry.
The Pork Skit.
The next skit showed Citizen Brown paying Andy, the butcher, 15 cents a pound for pork roast in 1934. Eight months later the price had risen to 30 cents. The butcher explained: "The Government has used the processing tax to destroy hogs and make meat more expensive."
In a breakfast nook sketch, Husband Jack was informed by Wife Jane that they could not afford bacon at 53 cents a pound. A year later they returned to the table to eat bacon imported from Poland. The husband observed: "We good Americans are eating Polish bacon in a suburb of Chicago, the world's meat packing center. It's the New Deal for foreign farmers."

An announcer followed this with the assertion pork consumption in the United States fell from six billion pounds in 1933 to four billion in 1935.

First of Four for WGN.
The program was the first of four scheduled for WGN. Most of it was broadcast from records previously recorded. Thomas G. Sabin, director of the National Committee's Radio Division, made several announcements from the studio. He planned to present the programs from independent stations after the two major networks declined to rent their facilities for dramatized political skits.

The program was entitled "Liberty at the Cross Roads." It was financed and sponsored by the Republican National Committee and the Illinois Republican Citizens' Organization.

More WPA Funds
GRANTED TO MISSOURI
Most of 8000 Jobs to Go to Those Put on Relief
Since Nov. 1.

Post-Dispatch Bureau.
201-205 Kellogg Building.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Harry L. Hopkins, WPA Administrator, today granted Missouri additional WPA funds intended to provide 8000 more WPA jobs.
Hitherto Hopkins has held that only those employables who were on the relief rolls prior to Nov. 1 could receive jobs. This is thought to be the first exception Hopkins has made to this deadline. Most of the additional WPA jobs will go to those who have gone on the relief rolls since Nov. 1.

Senator Truman said that Hopkins had authorized him to inform State Relief Administrator Wallace Crossley he might use relief funds now at his disposal in any way he saw fit. This means, according to Truman, that Crossley will not be under the necessity of making the comparatively small amount now available stretch out over three months, to April 1.

It would indicate that the administration is preparing to enter the field of direct relief again. All Federal aid for direct relief was ended by order of Hopkins on Dec. 1, Missouri, like many other states, had a balance remaining from previous Federal grants.

'CHARITY RACKET' PLOT CHARGED TO OFFICIALSMayor and Police Chief of River Rouge, Mich., Accused With 7 Others.

By the Associated Press.
DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 15.—Warrants charging the mayor and police chief of suburban River Rouge and seven other persons with conspiracy to defraud in an alleged "charity racket" were signed today by recorder's Judge George Murphy.

The warrants are based on an investigation of a yearbook issued in the name of the River Rouge and Highland Park police departments.

The complaint alleges that $11,800 was collected, partly by intimidation or promises of police immunity, by solicitors who represented that the money was to buy Christmas baskets for the poor, but that only $300 actually was spent for that purpose.

Those accused are Arthur H. Valade, mayor of River Rouge; E. K. Hanlon, suspended River Rouge police chief; Charles H. Baker, Highland Park police chief; Harry Goldberger, missing promoter; Austin Doyle, alleged advertising solicitor for Goldberger; and four "John Does."

RUDYARD KIPLING'S CONDITION SHOWS FURTHER IMPROVEMENTBritish Author "Had Quiet Night but Still Gives Cause for Great Anxiety."

By the Associated Press.
LONDON, Jan. 15.—Rudyard Kipling's condition showed further improvement today after his second restful night since he underwent an emergency operation Monday, but his physicians still felt "great anxiety" for the health of the poet and novelist.

Dr. A. E. Webb-Johnson, who operated on him for a perforated stomach ulcer, went home for a few hours' sleep after keeping watch at his patient's bedside during the early morning hours, planning not to return until later today.

The Middlesex Hospital announced at 7 a. m. that Kipling "had a quiet night, but his condition still gives cause for great anxiety." A bulletin at 11 a. m. said, "Kipling's condition shows slight improvement."

TWO NAVY MOTOR BOATS SINK

Stay on Small Raft Until Aid Arrives.

NEWPORT, R. I., Jan. 15.—Eleven sailors from two navy motorboats were forced to launch a small raft in the open sea, three miles off shore, last night, when their craft sank in 25 feet of water after striking an obstruction.

The sailors, attached to the naval torpedo station here, were picked up by a Coast Guard patrol boat from the Price's Neck station, which reached them only a few minutes before the naval destroyer Hamilton and the Coast Guard cutter Argo.

The men then were transferred to the Hamilton and returned to their station.

ALDERMEN TAKE CRITICAL VIEW OF

morrow—Estimate Board Invited to Attend.GUMMELS, SLAY, ROUTLEDGE OPPOSEDLatter Suggests That Memorial Proposal Might Turn Out to Be $9,000,- 000 Parking Lot.

The Ways and Means Committee of the Board of Aldermen will meet at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow, to consider Mayor Dickmann's bill for issuance of $2,250,000 city bonds, for the city's one-fourth share of a $9,000,000 start on the $30,000,000 Jefferson Memorial river front improvement.

The committee has invited the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, consisting of the Mayor, President Mason of the Board of Aldermen and Comptroller Nolte, to attend its meeting. The Board of Estimate approved the bond measure last Friday by vote of the Mayor and Mason, with Nolte opposing. The Comptroller has since issued two statements setting forth his arguments against the bill.

It was the Mayor's hope that the bill could be approved by the Ways and Means Committee without delay, and passed by the Aldermen this week. The committee, however, has taken a critical attitude toward the bill.

Nick Reidy, chairman of the committee, repeated yesterday his previous declaration that a thorough study of the measure should be made, and that assurance of further Federal funds, beyond the $6,750,000 provided in President Roosevelt's executive order of Dec. 21, should be required.

Gummels Opposes Measure.
Alderman Elbert Gummels, a member of the committee, said he would not favor the measure, particularly as his ward, the Eleventh, voted against the $7,500,000 memorial bond issue proposal, in the special election of Sept. 10 last. The Eleventh Ward voted, 2523 yes and 3404 no, on the proposal, which carried in the city-wide vote by 123,000 to 50,000.

Alderman Charles Routledge said he would not favor a program which might leave the city with "a $9,000,000 parking lot on its hands," through failure of the Federal Government to make a further contribution. Alderman John R. Slay expressed himself against the bill. Both are members of the committee.

Alderman Otto Lietchen, another member, said he believed enough of the aldermen would favor the bill to take it out of the committee and pass it, if necessary, and that he would not oppose it. The other members, Aldermen Toberman and Warwick, are understood to favor the bill.

Board to Meet Friday.
The Board holds its next regular meeting Friday afternoon. If the committee does not make a report on the bill within a reasonable time, the Board will take the bill out of the committee's hands and bring it to a vote.

Some Aldermen not usually supporting Mayor Dickmann are understood to favor the memorial bond issue bill. The arguments made against it are, in large part, those of Comptroller Nolte, who holds that the present plan is not legally the same which the voters approved when they authorized a $7,500,000 bond issue to pay the city's one-fourth of a $30,000,000 Parma Rivers for a drive on our Somerville front in the Dolo region.

On Jan. 12, Graziani (Gen Rodolfo Graziani, the southern Italian commander) began a vigorous action against Ras Desta's troops. "The Ethiopians were repulsed and pursued."

"Fighting continues along the entire front. Our losses so far have not been serious."
"There is intense aerial activity along the Eritrean front." (Heavy rains have been reported in this section.)

SWEDISH PROTEST
GIVEN TO ITALY

STOCKHOLM, Jan. 15. — The Swedish Government, in a note handed to the Italian Minister yesterday, protested against the Italian bombing of a Swedish ambulance unit in Ethiopia, in which it said one Swedish subject was killed and another wounded.

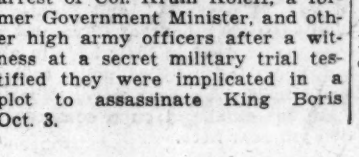

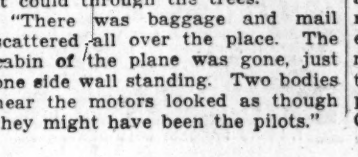

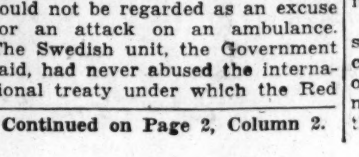

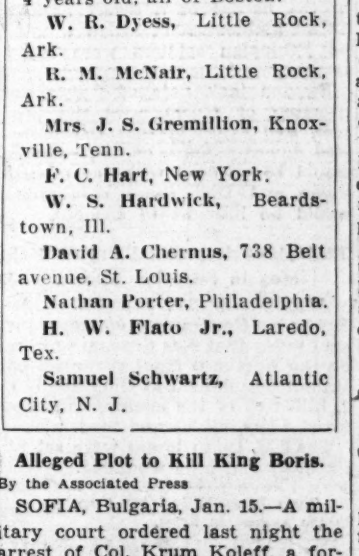

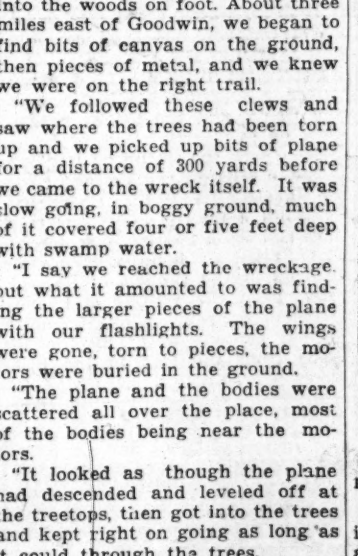

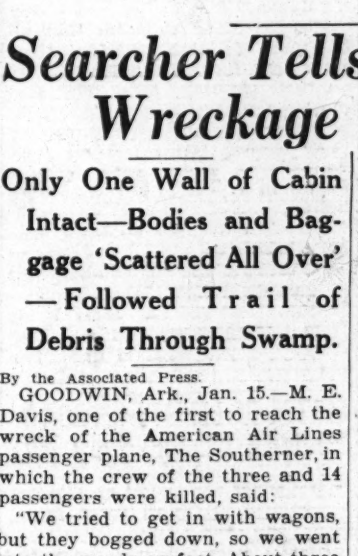

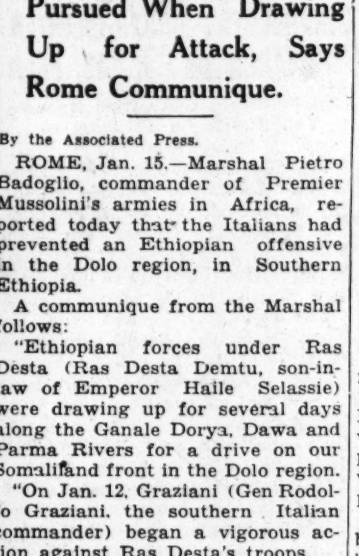

The note said a statement by the Italian military authorities that the bombing was in reprisal for an Ethiopian violation of war laws could not be regarded as an excuse for an attack on an ambulance. The Swedish unit, the Government said, had never abused the international treaty under which the Red

Boat at Bogota. Planes were reported searching the route. The military plane left Puerto Boy at 2 p. m. yesterday.

The Pan-American Airways office in New York said it had information that the plane left from a point on the Amazon River for Bogota at 4 p. m. yesterday, and that the flight was expected to take 3½ hours.

By the Associated Press.
GOODWIN, Ark., Jan. 15.—Seventeen persons were killed last night when an American Air Lines passenger plane en route from New York to Los Angeles crashed in a swamp near here.

The loss of life was the heaviest on record in an American plane crash.

None aboard the plane survived. The list of dead includes 12 men, four women and one child. Fourteen of them were passengers, the other three members of the crew.

Found at Midnight.
The plane, The Southerner, left Memphis about 7 p. m. Twenty-five minutes later it ripped into trees and mud, where it lay until searchers found the 17 bodies about midnight.

Lake Littlejohn, air inspector for the Department of Commerce, said today it would be "practically impossible to fix the cause" of the crash. There was little of the plane intact, wreckage being scattered over an area 400 yards long by 75 yards wide.

The plane was in charge of Pilot Gerald V. Marshall, 40 years old, who had been with the company since 1928 and who had 9400 flying hours to his credit. The co-pilot was Glenn Freeman, former manager of a Joplin (Mo.) airport. Miss Perla Gasparini, 23, of Fort Worth, Tex., stewardess, was the other member of the crew.

Inquest Held.
An inquest was held at the scene at dawn by J. C. Crawford, aged, crippled coroner of St. Francis County. The coroner was carried on a stretcher through the swamps and held aloft by four men, standing in water, as he examined the bodies, heard the testimony of two farmers who saw the plane fall and made notes in a small book by lantern light. The coroner returned a verdict that all 17 died "by accidental airplane crash."

Gaylord Dover of Palestine, Ark., testified he was walking along Highway 70—which is usually followed by the transcontinental planes across Arkansas—when he saw the air liner flying low over the adjacent woods.

"The motor didn't sound right," he said. "Suddenly, the plane dipped down into the trees. The motor quit, and the ship disappeared."

Glenn Williamson, also of Palestine, said he was reading at his home when he heard "the motor sputter," and looked out a window.

Bodies Removed.
"I saw it dip into the timber and crash," he said.
The bodies which had been recovered were carried before the coroner on stretchers and, with the assistance of Cecil West of the Little Rock airport, who held a passenger list, he attempted identification.

The first body to be identified was that of W. S. Hardwick of Beardstown, Ill., a contractor with offices in St. Louis.

EXCESS FUNDS CAUSE CONCERN TO BIG BANKERS

W. W. Aldrich of Chase National Advocates Immediate Action by Federal Reserve Officers.

J. H. PERKINS CITES LOAN OBSTACLES

Industries With Reduced Inventories Have Plenty of Money—New York Loss on Van Sweringen.

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—A note of concern over huge excess banking reserves and low interest rates ran through the annual reports to stockholders of several large New York banks yesterday.

Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the Chase National Bank, advocated immediate action by Federal Reserve authorities to reduce excess reserves of member depositories, which, he said, was a matter of grave consequence to the financial community and to the economic welfare of the whole country.

James H. Perkins, chairman of the National City Bank, told shareholders of the difficulties encountered in "making adequate profits" because of the excess of funds and lack of borrowers, and a similar complaint was made to stockholders of the First National Bank by Jackson E. Reynolds, president.

Cheerful About Business.
In contrast to the pessimistic stand taken on these questions, however, were the cheerful statements concerning the business situation in the country by the trend of the business. "I think everything possible will be done in Washington and elsewhere to make the present upswing continue," Perkins was equally optimistic.

In urging Federal Reserve officials to act at once to cure the evils bound up with excess funds, Aldrich said:

"The question of timing corrective action is a matter with which the heads of central banks since the war have almost invariably found it difficult to deal. The issue always presents itself as a choice between preventive action and curative action. Frequently when the business situation is over-ripe, or when conflicting purposes are involved, central banks are apt to postpone preventive action until indubitable signs of crisis manifest themselves and drastic curative action becomes mandatory. "We are now at the stage when preventive action is called for by a minimum of adverse effects and thereby forestall more drastic curative action later on."

A Combination Program.
He recommended a combination program of reserve requirements and disposal of whatever proportion necessary of the $2,430,000,000 of Federal Government securities held by reserve banks.

Perkins dwelt with obstacles in the path of banks in placing such loans. The great industrial corporations upon which the banks depend for an outlet, he said, have more money than they can use, due to the cessation of normal capital expenditures and reduced inventories.

Reynolds elaborated on similar problems facing the First National and predicted earnings would "pretty soon" fall below dividend requirements unless there is a reversal in trend.

Losses of the two largest banks incident to participation in a syndicate, which advanced $39,500,000 to the Van Sweringen brothers, recently liquidated, were disclosed. Chase lost $4,589,000 of its $5,500,000, and National City dropped $750,000 of the $4,500,000 originally advanced.

AUTOGRAPH HUNTERS SEND $1 CHECKS TO HAUPTMANN

When Prisoner Indorses Drafts, Senders Get His Signature; Broadcast Started It.

By the Associated Press.
TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 15.—A radio commentator announced some weeks ago that many persons were sending checks for $1 to Bruno Hauptmann in order to get his indorsement as an autograph. Prison authorities said today that no such checks had been received prior to the broadcast, but that afterward the checks began to come in. "Of course, Hauptmann had to sign the checks," an official said, "and the autograph hunters got their wish, and Hauptmann's prison bank account got the dollars."

STOP DICTATOR TREND, WARBURG ADVISES U. S.

Defeat of Roosevelt Might Turn World Tide, He Declares in Speech.

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, Jan. 15.—James P. Warburg, banker and former economic adviser to the Roosevelt administration, said today that the status of constitutional democracy in the United States "has become extremely doubtful" since March, 1933.

In a speech prepared for delivery before the Association of Commerce, the former vice-chairman of the Bank of the Manhattan Co., renewed his criticism of President Roosevelt, and said the world-wide trend toward dictatorships in government since the war was the result of broken political promises and failure of citizens to exercise the right to govern themselves. "I have been outspoken in my criticism of the present administration," he said, "and it is certainly not my purpose here to retract one word of what I have said. But—" "If this administration has brought us to the brink of relinquishing our right of self-government and becoming vassals of an arbitrary Federal authority—" "If this administration has interfered with the economic life of our country to an unwarranted degree—" "If this administration has played havoc with our currency, dishonored our national promises, and spent the people's money heedlessly and wastefully in pursuit of a strange mixture of utopian dreams and cynically practical partisan purposes—" "If all these things are true, they are true partly because Mr. Roosevelt repudiated his pre-election promises, but even more because we have failed to exercise diligently that fundamental right to govern ourselves which is the essence of America."

He said he did not believe the President could be re-elected "as the champion of the Democratic principle," but "must stand for a continuance of the world-wide trend away from democracy towards dictatorship in the next election."

"If he is elected," he went on, "it seems inevitable that the trend will continue further—just how far no one can tell. If he is defeated, then it is quite possible that the tide will turn throughout the world."

ITALIANS REPORT BLOCKING ENEMY DRIVE IN SOUTH

Cross is guaranteed protection in war time. Investigation of the bombing, the note asserted, disclosed that it was in the nature of a direct assault on an ambulance in which wounded Ethiopian soldiers were being treated.

Sweden took note of Italy's expression of regret, said the protest, and expected that the promised investigation of the attack would be pursued with the utmost vigor and that those responsible would be brought to account.

LOSES MOVE TO BLOCK PLEA FOR 1922 FIRE RATE CASE FEE

Attorney-General McKittick Fails to Get Write From State Supreme Court.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 15.—A writ of prohibition sought by Attorney-General McKittick to restrain Judge Nike Sevier of Cole County Circuit Court from holding further hearings on an application by attorneys for allowance of additional fees in the old 1922 fire insurance rate reduction case, was denied by the Missouri Supreme Court en banc late yesterday. The court did not hand down an opinion.

The case involved an application by former Attorney-General John T. Barker, Floyd E. Jacobs and Glenn C. Weatherly, all of Kansas City, special counsel for the State Insurance Department in the rate litigation, for a "partial" allowance of $50,000 each. The fees would be paid from approximately $2,750,000 impounded in the case in Circuit Court. Barker has said a total fee of 20 per cent of this fund, or about $550,000, would be a "modest" allowance.

The Attorney-General, appearing at the direction of Gov. Park, opposed any fee allowance, when the case was heard last month. He contended Barker and Jacobs had been fully compensated through $158,000 in fees previously paid them in the 1922 case and recalled they had entered into an agreement with former Gov. Caulfield that a payment of $100,000 in 1931 was in "full settlement" of their claims for fees in the case.

Weatherly has received no fee allowances in the 1922 case, but has received some fees in pending suits over a 16.23 per cent increase.

CHINESE URGED TO SHORTEN GOWNS, USE SAVING FOR GUNS
Gen. Feng Also Proposes Buttons Be Dispensed With, 400,000,000 Bullets Be Bought Instead.

NANKING, China, Jan. 15.—Gen. Feng Yu-Hsiang, once known as the "Christian General," has advanced a proposal which he says will save the nation millions of dollars annually, and make it possible to fight "the enemy"—meaning Japan.

Marshal Feng proposes that all the men of China shorten their gowns one foot, thus saving money on their clothing bills. He also proposes that China's 400,000,000 people stop buying buttons for their clothes. This last measure, he believes, would save enough money in a year to buy 400,000,000 bullets.

China's university students, who have been condemning the Central Government and demanding that China should fight Japanese penetration, received a reply today from Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek: "If you want to fight, join the army."

STATUE OF LIBERTY REPAIRED WITH $33,000 FROM PWA

New Copper Strips Put on Heating System in Order, Torch Is Gone Over.

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—The Statue of Liberty, which will be 50 years old in October, has been repaired with $33,000 in PWA funds. Years had blackened the green copper statue, its heating system was faulty and the torch needed work on it.

Each year the statue on Bedloe's Island, a mile off the Battery, costs the Government $19,000. Its electric light bill alone is $8000. Power lines run from nearby New Jersey. The repairs include sandstone flooring in the tunnels of its pedestal, light tile walling and new strips of copper. A quarter of a million persons walk up the 161 steps from the foot to the head every year.

SUPREME COURT HEARS NEWSPAPER TAX CASE

Attorneys for 13 Louisiana Publications Argue Against Huey Long Act.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The constitutionality of a Louisiana law taxing newspaper, magazine and motion picture advertisements was argued in the Supreme Court yesterday. The decision will be announced within a few weeks. The act has been held unconstitutional by a three-judge Federal district court in Louisiana.

The measure imposes a 2 per cent gross receipts tax on publications with a weekly circulation of 20,000 or more. During two hours of argument, accusations were made by attorneys for 13 Louisiana newspapers that the law violated the constitutional guarantee of a free press and was advanced by the late Senator Long for a "purely punitive purpose" against the newspapers.

This was disputed by Charles J. Rivet, special assistant to the Louisiana Attorney-General, who contended that a tax on advertisements in no way affected liberty of speech or of the press. He also insisted newspapers were corporations which did not enjoy the privileges and immunities of citizens.

Esmond Phelps, New Orleans attorney, and co-publisher of the New Orleans Times-Picayune, contended the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution protected newspapers in the "right of liberty against State action."

Charles Hanson of Washington contended with him in contending the only tax newspapers should be compelled to pay was one "levied on all citizens."

"There should be no discrimination," Hanson asserted. "No tax should be levied on the life blood of a newspaper. That's what advertising is."

BONDHOLDERS' GROUP GRANTED HEARING ON MO. PAC. PLAN

Iron Mountain Committee Opposes Van Sweringen Program of Reorganization.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The Interstate Commerce Commission today authorized a protective committee protesting against the Van Sweringen plan for reorganization of the Missouri Pacific to intervene in a hearing on the plan.

The committee, headed by R. G. Page, vice-president of the Bankers' Trust Co. of New York, told the commission it represented $16,204,000, or 48 per cent of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Railway Co.'s river and gulf division first mortgage 4 per cent bonds.

The rights of the holders of these obligations, the committee set out, would be affected adversely by the Van Sweringen plan, on which the commission will conduct a hearing Feb. 4.

DISPUTE OVER HULL IN NEUTRALITY HEARING

Witness Withdraws Remark That Secretary Backed League Sanctions.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The House Foreign Affairs Committee forced withdrawal yesterday of a remark that Secretary of State Hull had backed League of Nations sanctions against Italy.

The committee is holding hearings on administration neutrality legislation, which would provide mandatory embargoes on arms and munitions for belligerents, permissive embargoes on war materials, and restrictions on financial assistance to warring countries.

Spokesmen for Sons of Italy of America, American Friends of Italy, and League for American Neutrality demanded that Italy and Ethiopia be exempted from additional neutrality legislation on the ground it would be discriminatory against them.

Joining in that argument, Frank A. Cassassa of Revere, Mass., said that the United States never would have been embroiled in the World War if Woodrow Wilson had not been imbued with the idea that he was leader of the world. That brought a few mummings from committee members.

Then Cassassa added that Hull had written the League in favor of sanctions, and that his later arrival along with those of France and England.

Several committeemen shouted, "Prove it!" Chairman McReynolds (Dem.), Tennessee, obviously displeased, told him to obtain proof. On his return, Cassassa withdrew his charge.

The committee intends to have Hull and Undersecretary of State Castle testify.

Peter Sabatino, New York lawyer and president of the American Friends of Italy, said he thought the neutrality bill was exactly the kind that would be suggested by the British Prime Minister.

He believed the United States Government should write an insurance policy for the British Empire," he said.

CHICAGO BOARD OF TRADE EXPELS ONE OF ITS MEMBERS
Also Announces Termination of Corporate Membership in Grain Corporation.

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, Jan. 15.—The Board of Trade announced yesterday the expulsion of Emanuel F. Rosenbaum and the suspension of Edwin S. Rosenbaum for five years, and the termination of corporate privileges heretofore enjoyed on the exchange by the Rosenbaum Grain Corporation.

This action was an outgrowth of the corporation's application for reorganization under the revised Federal Bankruptcy Act.

The penalties were fixed by Board of Trade directors last Oct. 25, but execution was withheld pending injunction which the Rosenbaum corporation obtained.

United States District Judge William H. Holly dissolved the stay order yesterday. His decision terminated action carried on for the last nine months by the grain exchange to enforce its rules. The issue was whether terms of Section 77-B of the amended bankruptcy act superseded the rights of the Board of Trade to discipline its members for insolvency.

3 CORONERS AID TEACHER CONVICTED OF KILLING FATHER Doubt Expressed About Blows on Head; Judge to Rule Later on New Trial Motion.

By the Associated Press.
WIRE, Va., Jan. 15.—Judge H. A. W. Skeen yesterday denied a new trial to Edith Maxwell, Wise County school teacher under 25-year sentence for the murder of her father, one the constitutional questions involved, said he would reserve his decision until tomorrow on the question of granting a new trial on the basis of newly discovered evidence.

Affidavits of three coroners' examining board, as to the cause of "Chief" Maxwell's death were presented by the defense today before Judge Skeen.

These coroners said the autopsy report attributing death to blows on the head did not contain sufficient facts to prove this contention. The three included Dr. Thomas A. Gonzales, acting medical officer for the borough of Manhattan in New York.

mules, advanced within 500 yards of the wreckage after bogging down many times. It was used to get the bodies out to the highway, a mile and a quarter away.

The last of the bodies was taken out of the swamp at 8:45 a. m., and all were removed to Memphis, where it was hoped identifications could be made.

Rescue workers left the wreckage as it was for inspection by Jack James of Fort Worth, inspector for the Department of Commerce.

Record of Trip.
The plane left Newark (N. J.) airport yesterday at 12:30 p. m., making the usual stops at Washington and other cities, taking on and discharging passengers.

Pilot Walter Hunter flew the ship from Newark to Memphis, said President C. R. Smith of American Airlines at Fort Worth.

"At Memphis," said Smith, "Pilot Hunter reported that the airplane was in excellent flying shape and that both motors were functioning fine. At Memphis, the airplane was taken by Pilot Gerald Vaughan Marshall, Co-Pilot Glenn Freeland and Stewardess Perla Gasparini."

"At Nashville, gasoline had been taken aboard, and the airplane left Nashville with 410 gallons, an amount sufficient to take it to Little Rock or Dallas."

"Pilot Marshall departed from Memphis westbound at 7:03 p. m. At 7:18, he reported to Memphis by radio that he was flying at 2000 feet, 35 miles west of Memphis, and that the weather was good and visibility 15 miles."

"After 7:18 contact, no further information was received from the airplane."

Search Started.
When the plane was nearly an hour overdue at Little Rock and no further wireless messages had been received, the company authorized searching parties to start out from both Memphis and Little Rock. Subsequently the airline sent five ambulances to Brinkley, near here, announcing the action as "a precautionary measure."

Postal officials from Little Rock gathered up what they could of the mail scattered through the woods, and after weighing it, said they thought all of it had been recovered.

Three in One Family.
The dead included three generations in one Wakefield (Mass.) family en route to California for a month's vacation. They were Mrs. Samuel Horowitz, about 38, her 62-year-old mother, Mrs. B. Horowitz, and her 4-year-old son, Seba.

The death of Julian Cahn, 26-year-old buyer for the May Co. in Los Angeles, was the second in his family in the last few weeks. He was returning from a New York business trip which had been interrupted by the death of his father. He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Yetta Cahn of Los Angeles.

Charles Altschul, 23, of Glendale, Cal., was a licensed plane pilot and a Yale graduate who had been taking an advanced course in flying at Glendale. He was a nephew of Mrs. Herbert W. Lehmann, Governor of New York.

W. R. Dyess was Works Progress Administrator for Arkansas, and R. H. McNair Jr. was one of his aids. Frank C. Hart of New York was president of the Hartol Products Co., and a recent defendant in a $250,000 damage suit by Mrs. Florence Hatzels, who charged he assaulted her. Hart, who ran a "hoesing" of $1000 into a sizeable fortune dealing in petroleum products, was an aviation enthusiast. When he married the former Muriel Constance Woodworth of New York at Reno last June, he took his bride on a flying honey-moon to Delmonte, Cal., providing a plane also for the wedding guests. His marriage to Miss Woodworth followed his divorce from the former Mrs. Marion Alexander of Orange, N. J., only a few hours.

Samuel Schwartz was manager of the Apollo Hotel at Atlantic City. A flying enthusiast and holder of a pilot's license, he was on a pleasure trip to Los Angeles. He was 45 years old, unmarried and resided with his mother, Mrs. Rosa F. Schwartz, who owns the hotel.

Nathan Porter, who boarded the plane at Memphis, was a buyer for a hide dealer. His widow, four sons and a daughter, survive at Philadelphia. He was on his way to Albuquerque, N. M.

Pilot Marshall Veteran Flyer and Texas Aviation Pioneer.
By the Associated Press.
FORT WORTH, Tex., Jan. 15.—"Jerry" Marshall, 40 years old, pilot of the plane which crashed near Goodwin, Ark., was a veteran flyer who for many years was associated with the development of aviation in Texas. He came to Texas from Columbus, O.

He helped inaugurate the South Texas air mail service, and later became operations manager at Fort Worth of the Southern Air Transport division of the Aviation Corporation.

In January, 1935, he was one of the pilots who helped inaugurate the double daily air service across the continent.

While attending the University of Texas, Marshall organized and operated for three years the University School of Aeronautics.

Miss Perla Gasparini, 23 years old, stewardess on the airline, had been assigned to the run only three months. She lived here, but airline officers said her family resided in Shaw, Miss.

Chernus a St. Louis Contractor; Hardwick's Office Here.
David A. Chernus, 38 years old and a native of Russia, operated the Chernus Construction Co., with offices in the Cotton Belt Building, and resided at 738 Belt avenue with his mother, Mrs. Lena Chernus, a sister, Ann B. Chernus, and a brother, Maurice C. Chernus. Another sister, Mrs. Joseph Sharf, lives in Minneapolis, Minn. The Chernus family has lived in St. Louis about a year and six months.

W. S. Hardwick was president of Hardwick & Horton, contractors, which has its principal office in the Arcade Building here. The office was transferred to St. Louis from Memphis, Tenn., last Sept. 1. Hardwick resided in Beardstown, Ill., about 150 miles northeast of St. Louis, and while in St. Louis on business, lived at the Mark Twain Hotel. His wife, Mrs. Louise Hardwick, and two children, Louise II, and Walter Jr., 9, survive.

W. R. Dyess was Works Progress Administrator for Arkansas, and R. H. McNair Jr. was one of his aids. Frank C. Man Who Left Plane at Memphis Says One Motor Failed.
By the Associated Press.
MEMPHIS, Tenn., Jan. 15.—John T. Shea, Memphis attorney, who left the American Air Lines plane here, last night, said today that one "motor didn't seem to be hitting right" when the big ship took off from Memphis. He boarded the plane at Nashville.

"Mrs. Shea met me at the airport," he said. "As we were ready to leave, the plane roared away over the southwest corner of the field. I remarked to Mrs. Shea that one motor did not seem to be hitting right. I couldn't detect anything wrong with it, except that it didn't seem to have that steady roar."

HUEY LONG'S EX-BODYGUARD FIRED AS CAPITOL POLICEMAN

Superior Says Action Was Due to Patronage Rules and Not Anti-Roosevelt Caricatures.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Capt. William Orthman of the Capitol police said today that J. E. Welch, former bodyguard of the late Senator Huey Long of Louisiana, had been discharged as sergeant in the force because of legislative caricatures distributed anti-Roosevelt caricatures. Welch had attributed his dismissal to the circulation of caricatures showing President Roosevelt as a Postmaster-General Farley exulting over the tombstones of Long and the late Senator Bronson Cutting of New Mexico. Each marker bore the legend, "victim of the Roosevelt double-cross."

Orthman, head of the force, said: "The rule of the Patronage Committee is that whenever a Senator or Congressman passes on, follow-up work must be done. NURSES TESTIFY TO CONDITIONS AT COUNTY HOSPITAL

Miss Witt Calls Management Inefficient; Says Employees Don't Know When They'll Be Fired.

DEPOSITIONS IN SUIT TO OUST DR. SHEAHAN

Miss Rapert, Floor Supervisor Who Quit, Tells of Shortage of Supplies and Experienced Help.

By the Associated Press.
ST. LOUIS, Jan. 15.—Nurses at St. Louis County hospital were described in vivid detail yesterday in testimony by Miss Loleta Witt, a nurse now employed there, and Miss Buena Vista Rapert, former supervisor of nurses, who resigned last November. Both were subpoenaed as witnesses in the suit to oust Dr. Sheahan.

Depositions in the ouster suit against Dr. Edwin L. Sheahan, hospital superintendent, filed last month by Prosecuting Attorney C. Arthur Anderson after 24 members of the hospital medical staff resigned because of "too much politics" in administration of the institution.

Miss Witt, who has been employed at the hospital since August, 1933, testified she did not think the hospital was efficiently operated. She said she had to get supplies and the superintendent had changed every day of the supervisors on the floor, she continued. "That's hard on patients, doctors and nurses."

Cautious by Anderson.
Anderson warned Miss Witt when she took the stand that her testimony might prejudice her standing in the hospital. County Counselor John E. Mooney, representing Dr. Sheahan, objected to Anderson's statement and denied that other employees, who testified before the grand jury last year, had been fired for that reason.

The witness testified conditions could be better at the hospital if Dr. Sheahan had more to say in the management of the hospital. Under the latter, she went on, "the nurses didn't know what they were doing and don't know it."

"There's no co-operation among the nurses because they've been changed so often," she continued. "I've been changed three times since last September. I spent 18 months in the nursery and Dr. Sheahan came and Miss Milled Maes became superintendent of nurses. I was taken out of the nursery and an attendant put in charge there. The nursery was restored to the charge of a nurse, she said.

"Feeling of Unrest."
"I have been told by other nurses that the superintendent of nurses told them I was 'dangerous' because I talked too much," said Miss Witt. "She knew that if any body asked me what I thought of the hospital, I'd tell them."

"There is a feeling of unrest in the hospital now. Nurses don't know what they're going to be fired—what that's not feeling much better," she told also of an older nurse in the hospital who was ordered to take two Negro

HUEY LONG'S EX-BODYGUARD FIRED AS CAPITOL POLICEMAN

Superior Says Action Was Due to Patronage Rules and Not Anti-Roosevelt Cartoons.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Capt. William Orthman of the capitol police said today that J. E. Welch, former bodyguard of the late Senator Huey Long of Louisiana, had been discharged as sergeant on the force because of patronage rules and not because he distributed anti-Roosevelt cartoons. Welch had attributed his dismissal to the circulation of cartoons showing President Roosevelt and Postmaster-General Farley smiling over the tombstones of Long and the late Senator Bronson Cutting of New Mexico. Each marker bore the legend, "victim of the Roosevelt double-cross."

"They died some months ago but Welch was carried on. Four or five weeks ago I told him that he was due to go and yesterday he got his notice. It was because of the rule and nothing else. I only saw the cartoons for the first time yesterday. Welch was as good as the average man we have here."

FUNDS IN PROSPECT; ILLINOIS RELIEF OFFICE NOT TO CLOSE

Secretary of Commission Acts on Expectation of $2,500,000 From Legislature.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 15.—Leo M. Lyons, executive secretary of the Illinois Emergency Relief Commission, instructed all relief stations in the State today to open as usual tomorrow morning.

The stations were to close at midnight tonight, but Lyons said everything indicated legislative action making fresh funds available would be completed in time to avoid even a temporary hitch in dispensing of relief. "As we understand it, the Senate will complete action before midnight," Lyons said, "and Gov. Horner will affix his signature immediately."

The appropriation measure sets aside $2,500,000 from the State general fund to bridge the gap left when Federal funds were exhausted.

ADMITTED THREATS ON PRESIDENT'S LIFE

from a patient's leg and there was no cotton available. The superintendent of nurses became furious at me—I had ordered the cotton but it hadn't been sent. The amount of supplies given out was cut and it was difficult to get materials for emergencies. One time a woman had a hemorrhage in the dressing room and the nurse had to get an O.K. slip from the operating room on the fourth floor before she could get supplies to take care of the patient."

Under Dr. Sheahan's predecessor, Dr. William G. Patton, workers at the hospital were efficient, she testified, but they "didn't stay that way" under the new administration and "an antagonistic feeling developed." Some of the nurses and attendants who became dissatisfied used to hold meetings in the utility room, she continued.

Between the time of Dr. Sheahan's dismissal by the County Court last June and his reinstatement in September, things again ran "pretty smoothly" under the temporary superintendent, Dr. Raymond T. Usher, who "seemed to be friendly to everyone," she testified.

Another witness, Mrs. Josephine Blakely, 8218 James avenue, Luxembourg, testified her brother-in-law, James Belchambers, was hurt in an accident and taken to the hospital, where two stitches were taken in his lip but admittance was refused him by a physician who said he was "not a hospital case."

His condition became worse on being taken home, she testified, and he was ordered back to the hospital by another physician. It was then found the man had a broken leg and two fractured ribs, she continued.

Belchambers was then put in a room and lay there all day with a sheet over him, she testified. That evening a man entered and said, "Who the hell left you here?" and the patient explained his leg was supposed to be put in a cast, she related. The man then left and returned with others who took care of the patient.

Fired Investigator Testifies. Andrew T. Sears, former investigator at the hospital, who was fired last autumn, in his testimony, testified that Dr. Sheahan's administration and said, "He didn't know what it was all about. You'd ask him a question on some big matter and he'd say he didn't know."

Sears testified the superintendent handled ambulance service poorly, failing to distribute calls to undertakers in their territories as was the custom. "He never made the rounds of the hospital until some Government investigators were there and told him he was supposed to," he continued. "He was in the morgue closed when they came, because it was so filthy, and saw that they were steered away from it."

The hearing was continued until Friday.

MIDNIGHT DEADLINE STANDS FOR CITY DRIVERS' LICENSES

No Postponement, Says Director of Streets; Only 148,000 Have Permits So Far.

St. Louisans who drive in the city without driver's licenses after midnight tonight will be subject to arrest. Director of Streets and Sewers Frank J. McDevitt said today that his letter to the Chief of Police asking that the law be enforced at that time still stands, and there "will be no postponement of the deadline, although only 148,000 out of the estimated total of 400,000 St. Louis motorists had their applications approved up to today."

Only about half the applicants who passed have received their licenses through the mail, difficulty with the machines photostating the licenses having caused delay. However, applicants who have not received their licenses may show police their receipts. If questioned, there were 152,000 city automobile licenses issued last year, indicating most regular drivers have obtained licenses, while occasional drivers have put it off.

TWO CONVICTED, GET 199 YEARS IN HOLDUP MURDER

Negroes Shot East St. Louis Street Car Motorman in 1934 When He Refused to Stop.

Artie Lee Green and Obie Goolsby, East St. Louis Negroes, were found guilty of murder last night by a jury in City Judge Borders' court, in the killing of Foster C. Morgan, operator of an East St. Louis street car, in an attempted holdup Aug. 15, 1934.

The jury, which returned its verdict after less than two hours of deliberation, fixed the penalty for each defendant at 199 years in prison. Under Illinois statutes, the Negroes will not be eligible for parole until they have served a third of the sentences, or 66 years.

A Post-Dispatch reporter a verdict of guilty was reached on the first ballot, the rest of time having been spent in determining the sentence. "A very fair verdict," Judge Borders later commented, "but it was a case which could have justified the extreme penalty. The murder was cold-blooded and cowardly."

Signed Confessions. Signed statements by the Negroes that they participated in the holdup were read to the jury. The statements were supplemented by testimony of Sheriff Sherrod and Richard Hudson, Negro detectives, who arrested Green and Goolsby last Nov. 5. Sherrod said each accused the other of firing the shot that killed the motorman.

Goolsby's statement was to the effect that he and Green had planned the holdup while drinking in a saloon. The two took a barrel from the side of a church at Twenty-second street and Broadway, where the shooting occurred, and placed it in the middle of the street car tracks. Goolsby hid behind the church and Green in high weeds nearby.

Morgan, seeing the barrel on the tracks, apparently became suspicious and sped his street car past the intersection, knocking the barrel from his path. Green then fired two shots through the door of the street car when the motorman failed to stop. Goolsby's statement read that the Negroes had admitted the attempted holdup and shooting to them.

Alibi Defense Offered. Each offered an alibi defense. Goolsby said he had worked late that night on a garbage truck and had gone to bed before midnight. He said he had never owned a revolver in his life. He charged that he had been beaten by police and forced to sign the statement.

Green testified he had gone to bed at 9 o'clock the night Morgan was murdered. He said he recalled the date because he had played baseball that day in Southern Illinois and had returned home tired.

Assistant State's Attorney R. V. Gustin and W. J. Phillips argued for the death penalty in closing arguments to the jury. The Negroes were represented by J. C. Crouch of St. Louis, who pleaded for leniency for the defendants, pointing out it was their first criminal offense.

Morgan, 49 years old, was alone in his car when the shooting occurred. One bullet shattered the glass in the door. The other struck him in the hip, ranging upward to the abdomen. He managed to continue for about a block, stopping in front of a foundry, and called to a night watchman. He died from the wound four days later at St. Mary's Hospital, East St. Louis.

BILL TO CUT AUTO LICENSES DECLARED LEGALLY DRAWN

City Counselor Says He Will So Advise Mayor Who Is Expected to Veto It.

City Counselor Edgar H. Wayman said today that the proposed ordinance passed yesterday by the Board of Aldermen, reducing city automobile license taxes in virtually every classification, was legally drawn. He said he would so advise Mayor Dickmann, who is expected to veto the bill.

A question as to the legality of the ordinance was raised yesterday when it was presented to the board. It is apparent that one of the results of the bill will be to embarrass the Mayor in his efforts to balance the city's budget or at least reduce the deficit by the end of the fiscal year, April 1.

License Collector Fred A. Renick said today that the bill would result in a reduction of city revenues of about $200,000, as the largest reduction in licenses was provided in the 36 to 48 horsepower bracket, in which the majority of automobiles fall. The reduction proposed is from $7.50 to $5.50. Mayor Dickmann declined to comment on reports that he was expected to veto the bill, but told reporters he would issue a statement when he took action on the ordinance.

Former Neighbors to Exchange Husbands

MRS. DESIREE D. WERDER (left) and her close friend, MRS. GLADYS J. BURNETT, departing from Reno divorce court.

TWO WOMEN AGREE TO SWAP HUSBANDS

Reno Divorces Clear Way for New Marriage of Former Neighbors.

By the Associated Press.

RENO, Nev., Jan. 15.—The way has been cleared here for an exchange of husbands by the granting of divorces to Mrs. Gladys J. Burnett and Mrs. Desiree D. Werder, young California women.

Mrs. Werder, second of the women to seek a divorce here within a week, divorced William M. Werder, former Stanford University track star, at a brief trial yesterday. Mrs. Burnett divorced Roy E. Burnett Jr. last Friday.

Through Harry Swanson, their attorney, the women admitted they planned to marry each other's husbands "as soon as the excitement of the divorces blows over."

Mrs. Werder will marry Burnett "within a month or two," Swanson said. Mrs. Burnett's marriage to Werder, he added, "may occur sooner—but no definite time has been fixed as yet, so far as I know."

The two young women—neighbors and friends in Redwood City, Cal., for years—were accompanied by their husbands to Reno more than six weeks ago. The wives set up housekeeping together in an apartment house here. The husbands went back to their homes in California.

Both charged cruelty—Mrs. Burnett at a private trial, Mrs. Werder at an open hearing in which she accused Werder of being "cold and indifferent" and on one occasion slapping her.

Burnett was understood to have accompanied his future wife back to California by automobile last night. Werder, Swanson said, has not been in Reno since he brought Mrs. Werder here to establish residence.

The Werders were married Nov. 11, 1932, at Stanford University and the Burnetts Sept. 3, 1934, at Tracy, Cal.

Custody of the Werders' 5-month-old daughter, Betty Lew, has been fixed in an agreement made outside of court. It is understood the child will be cared for at the home of Werder's parents—at least until after the expected remarriages.

Werder formerly was district manager at Redwood City for a large oil company, and Burnett was manager of a rival firm. After their plans for exchanging wives became known, Werder was transferred to San Francisco where he manages a gasoline service station.

SECURITIES VALUED AT $6530 STOLEN FROM SAFE IN HOME

John H. Wiewel Also Loses $95 in Cash and Jewelry.

John H. Wiewel, 8721 Argyle avenue, Overland, reported to police last night that burglars stole $95 cash, securities valued at $6530, and $25 in jewelry from a small safe they forced open during the absence of the family from the home early in the evening.

He said the securities included several deeds of trust, shares of utility stock, and promissory notes, in addition to insurance papers. Neighbors reported seeing an unfamiliar car in the Wiewel driveway and hearing the noise of hammering in the house.

INDICTMENT IN AUTO DEATH Emil Feistel Accused of Manslaughter in Death of Edward Moran.

An indictment charging manslaughter was voted by the grand jury yesterday against Emil Feistel, a chauffeur, 5061 Delmar boulevard, in the death of Edward Moran, a plumber, 4163 Peck street, in an automobile collision New Year's eve between automobiles driven by the two men. The accident occurred at Grand boulevard and Penrose street.

NEW HAUPTMANN PLEA TO SUPREME COURT REPORTED

Condemned Man Signs Paper Understood to Be Addressed to U. S. Tribunal or Member Thereof.

(Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.) TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 15.—Bruno Richard Hauptmann signed today a new application in a Federal proceeding to prevent his execution Friday night for the Lindbergh baby murder.

His attorneys, visiting him in the death house, obtained his signature to a paper which was understood to be needed in an application to the United States Supreme Court or a member thereof for a writ of habeas corpus.

Two defense lawyers, Nugent Dodds and Neil Burkinshaw, indicated they planned to leave at once for Washington, and that action would be taken tomorrow.

Gov. Harold G. Hoffman announced through his press representative today that he was still studying the Hauptmann case and was undecided on the matter of a reprieve.

The attorneys, losing in Federal habeas corpus proceedings, intended to apply to Gov. Hoffman today for a reprieve. There were definite indications, one of them said, that a reprieve would halt the electrocution, set for 8 p. m. Friday.

Reports concerning a reprieve gained wide circulation after a long night conference of defense counsel. Earlier the Attorney-General, David T. Wientz, said he was "reliably informed" the Governor would grant a reprieve.

In Federal Circuit Court here yesterday, Hauptmann asked for a writ of habeas corpus; Judge Warren J. Davis refused it. Hauptmann asked for a stay of execution. This, too, was denied.

Judge Davis, delivering his decision just before 6 p. m., said that to grant the petition: "I would in effect be overruling the Court of Errors and Appeals of this State and the Supreme Court of the United States. This would, it seems to me, be sheer, inexcusable judicial egotism on my part."

The hopelessness of further recourse was voiced by two members of Hauptmann's five-man legal staff.

HALF-CENT RISE IN GASOLINE TO GO IN EFFECT TOMORROW

Standard Oil (Indiana) Announces Increase in Other Companies Expected to Follow.

A rise of one-half cent a gallon in the retail price of gasoline, effective tomorrow, in Missouri and Mid-Western states was announced today by the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana. The new prices in St. Louis will be 19.7 cents for ethyl, 17.7 cents for regular and 14.7 for third grade gasoline including a tax of four cents, of which one cent is Federal, two cents State and one cent city.

At present the three grades are priced at 19.2 cents, 17.2 cents and 14.2 cents respectively. Other large companies are expected to announce a similar rise.

HUNDREDS OF SHOW PEOPLE ATTEND FUNERAL OF 'ROXY'

Honor Guard of 12 Marines for Coffin; S. L. Rothafel Seven Years in Service.

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Hundreds of show people filled the Central Synagogue today for the funeral services for Samuel Lionel Rothafel, known to motion picture and radio audiences throughout the country as "Roxy." Rothafel, who was 53 years old, died Monday of heart disease.

The services were conducted by Rabbi Stephen S. Wise. Preceding the bronze, flag-covered coffin into the synagogue was an honor guard of 12 Marines from the Brooklyn Navy Yard. Later they fired a volley over the grave of Rothafel who served seven years as a marine.

Outside the synagogue were hundreds of others. The services were attended by delegations from the Catholic Actors' Guild, the Episcopal Actors' Guild, the Lambs, the Players, the Friars, the American Federation of Actors, the Jewish Theatrical Guild and the Theatrical Protective Union.

INVESTIGATING KILLING, SHOOTS ANOTHER MAN

Kansas City Detective Fatally Wounds Youth, Who, He Says Drew Pistol.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 15.—Detective William Eldridge shot and killed Robert A. Toomes, 21 years old, today soon after the body of Ernest Burton, 52, a WPA worker, was found in his apartment here.

Eldridge went to Burton's apartment when police were notified he had been killed. Eldridge found Burton lying on the floor with a bullet in his heart.

Eldridge said he heard a rap on the door while he was talking to Mrs. Marie Simmons, 36 years old, occupant of an adjoining apartment. He opened the door and was confronted by a young man who told him, Eldridge said, he had knocked at the wrong apartment. Eldridge said the man started away but the detective became suspicious and said, "Take your hands out of your pockets." The youth drew a pistol and shouted, "Don't move," Eldridge said. The officer then fired three times, killing Toomes.

Five women held for questioning in the case gave conflicting statements but police said it had been established Toomes had visited Mrs. Simmons' apartment a short time before Burton was killed.

Police said Mrs. Doris Creek, 21 years old, Burton's housekeeper who lived with Mrs. Simmons in the adjoining apartment, made a statement regarding the shooting of Burton, to the following effect: "Mrs. Creek, Miss Rita Simmons, 16 years old, and Margaret Gorney, 14, had met three men, one of them Toomes, at a night club. All went to the Simmons apartment. Mrs. Creek said Burton was jealous of her and one of the men, whose name she did not know, asked her, 'Do you want me to put him (Burton) to sleep?' The man left the room and went to Burton's apartment. A few minutes later the group in the Simmons apartment heard a shot and went to Burton's apartment. They found him dead."

SILICOSIS INQUIRY

West Virginia Legislator Says State Committee Couldn't Fix Facts on Tunnel Deaths.

UNDERTAKER DENIES MARCANTONIO STORY

Lawyer Says Nearly Everybody Claimed Damages as Soon as Few Settlements Were Made.

By the Associated Press.

GAULEY BRIDGE, W. Va., Jan.
15.—Two men who have studied the building of the $10,000,000 Hawk's Nest hydro-electric tunnel said today there was no way of finding out how many workmen on the job contracted silicosis or died of it.

A subcommittee of the national House of Representatives Labor Committee will hold hearings on a resolution by Representative Marcantonio (Rep., New York, asking for an investigation.

Marcantonio declared 476 men died of the malady caused by breathing dust of silica sand and 1500 others still were ill.

The tunnel was completed two years ago for the New-Kanawha Power Co. During the drilling the valuable glass sand was discovered and it was mined and saved for future use. Silicosis is an inflammation of the lungs caused by dust particles, such as glass sand.

Legislator's Comment.
William S. Wysong, member of the State Legislature who had the law amended to make silicosis compensable under the Workmen's Compensation Act, said a congressional committee would "have a hard time" finding out how many victims there were. He said a legislative committee was not able to do so.

George S. Couch, counsel for Rinehart & Dennis, of Charlotteville, Va., the firm which built the conversion tunnel through the mountains, said in Charleston:

"After the contractors paid the claims of a number of men who proved they suffered the effects of the disease everybody in Southern West Virginia seemed to have sil-ciosis. Nobody on earth will ever know how many persons contracted it."

At Summersville, 27 miles away,
H. C. White, an undertaker, denied Marcantonio's declaration that some of those who died were "dumped into a cornfield."

He pointed to a little graveyard on his father's farm, a few hundred feet from the nearest cor-ried, and said "there was no other place to bury them."

Of the 33 persons in the graves —marked by wooden markers—
White said none of the death certificates gave silicosis as the cause of death, although some listed pneumonia.

"The contractors who dug the tunnel paid me for the funerals, and the cost covered burial clothes as well as graves," he said.

"Some of the bodies we kept for a long time. Nobody knew who their survivors were... No one ever claimed a single one of the bodies."

Three Graves of Women.

He declared that of the 33 graves three were those of women.
"One of the women was killed in a fight with knives, another one was killed when a tree fell on her shack."

White said there was another cemetery near the dam.

He continued: "Rinehart & Dennis paid me also to prepare some bodies for shipment home; that is, when they could find out where their homes were. I don't remember how many of those bodies we handled. Most of those people died of pneumonia."

He said the first man buried was Roosevelt Singleton, on May 15, 1931. Eighteen were buried between May 15 and Oct. 17, 1931. Of those, 16 were recorded as victims of pneumonia and two were killed in accidents.

BOARD HEARS PLEA FOR TEACHERS' UNION

Two Spokesmen Urge Repeal of Dead-Letter Rule on Joining Organization.

Union spokesmen urged the Board of Education last night to repeal a dead-letter rule forbidding teachers to belong to labor unions. The board, which heard the speakers informally after its regular meeting, gave no indication of its attitude toward the repeal, a resolution for which has been pending in the Instruction Committee for two months.

The Teachers' Union of St. Louis and St. Louis County, a branch of the American Federation of Teachers, has been trying for nine months to have the regulation withdrawn. Dr. Paul W. Preisler of Washington University medical school, president of the union, and Robert Tommen, business manager of the Motion Picture Operators' Union and representative of Central Trades and Labor Union, spoke for the repeal.

"This rule," said Dr. Preisler, "abridges the right of the teacher to belong to an organization of her choosing. It is a question of whether even only one or two teachers, if they wish to join, may do so. Governmental agencies have approved labor organizations and this board should, too. Last April I was told the rule was unconstitutional and only remained on the books because of the expense of removing it (by reprinting)."

Tells of "No-Strike Policy."

"There is an apparent prejudice of what the union is going to do. We are not going to put out pickets and such things. You may judge the union by what it has done elsewhere. The national union has a 'no-strike' policy, which few other unions have. No local of our union can call a strike unless a national referendum of convention permits. The national has been in existence since 1917 and I doubt if you have seen tactics by it to which you could object."

"The union is not opposed to the board, the superintendent, or the principals. Elsewhere it has helped in having tax rates voted and in other ways to maintain high standards. The board need not be afraid we would come down here and quibble on every little thing."

In view of past questions by board members, Dr. Preisler denied that Negro teachers would be excluded from the union. Replying to Dr. Francis C. Sullivan, he declined to tell how many members the union had because it has voted not to disclose membership details while the board's rule stood. Answering Mrs. Elias Michael, he said bona fide teachers and former teachers and others licensed by the State to teach were eligible as members.

Asks About Hadley Case.

Dr. Preisler declined to interpret application of the rule when asked by Richard Murphy if union men who had been instructors at Hadley Vocational School would be subject to dismissal. Murphy argued that a decision by the Supreme Court of Missouri a number of years ago, assuring teachers of permanent tenure of their positions, had served to invalidate the rule, but suggested that a case be taken to court to have the regulation definitely knocked out.

Tommen pointed out that no other city had such a rule and that St. Louis had got along without it prior to the World War. The union, he explained, did not say the teachers must or should organize, but that they should have the right to decide for themselves. Dr. David C. Todd raised the question of Negro membership and Tommen asserted that most international unions in the country included Negroes. Mrs. Michael reminded him that building trades unions barred Negroes, but Tommen said he could see no connection with the teachers' case.

Palmer E. Baumes, head of the Baumes-McDevitt Co., consulting engineers, has been chosen on the recommendation of Chancellor Throppe of Washington University to study conflicting proposals for the supply of electricity at the "southwestern" high school now under construction. The board last night authorized his employment, at a cost not to exceed $500. At the same time it deferred action on a second set of bids for engines and generators for the schools. The board's own engineer and Union Electric Light and Power Co. have presented widely different figures on cost of generating or purchasing current. A special meeting may be held to act on whatever Baumes reports.

The board approved unanimously the leasing for five years of a vacant lot, 562 by 583 feet, bounded by Kingshighway and Natural Bridge, Lexington and Norwood avenues, adjoining Public Schools Stadium, to the Northwestern Soft Ball Association, headed by L. H. Meidner, 6328 Cates avenue. Rent will be $4000 the first year and $5000 annually thereafter.

Action on a report of a civic committee last month, which urged co-ordination of the municipal and school playground and recreation systems, was deferred by the board until next month because of the absence of one member, Henry P. Schroeder. Dr. Sullivan, a proponent of the report, told a reporter he understood Schroeder would oppose it.

A $19,650 contract for alterations and additions at the Froebel School, 3709 Nebraska avenue, was awarded to J. S. Alberici.

$5000 for School Exhibition.

The board appropriated $5000 for a school exhibition at the convention of the department of superintendence of the National Education Association, which will open here Feb. 23. It voted to close the schools Feb. 26, "Missouri day" of the convention.

Albert Bond Lambert, member of the Police Board, addressed the Board of Education at length on the safety of children going to and from school. Complaining of lack of public support in the effort to reduce motor accidents, he urged that the board head a movement to solidify public opinion in favor of street safety. He recommended that "school stop" signs be made more apparent to drivers and that the speed limit be reduced from 30 to 25 miles an hour during periods when children were going to and from school. An increase of 300 in the police force would be of great value in protecting children, he said.

AAA EMPLOYEES DRAWING PAY

Treasury Releases Checks; Cites Ruling by Comptroller General.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The Treasury said today it was releasing current payroll checks to AAA employees. This step was taken, the department said, in view of a ruling by Comptroller General McCarl, which the Treasury regarded as a "precedent." McCarl approved a warrant transferring to Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau funds from $100,000,000 appropriated to the AAA for administrative expenses.

The Treasury said this transfer of funds would permit immediate payment of current salaries to Internal Revenue Bureau employees who have been engaged in collecting processing taxes. On this

"precedent," it said, AAA employees were being paid.

WASHINGTON U. BUYS WHISTLER PAINTING

"Nocturne: The Solent" on View at City Art Museum.

The purchase by Washington University of a painting by James McNeill Whistler, one of the great American artists, was announced today by Chancellor George H. Throppe.

The picture, entitled "Nocturne: The Solent," was acquired through the American art fund established in 1906 by the late W. K. Bixby. It is on view at City Art Museum in Forest Park where the Bixby collection is displayed as a permanent loan to the museum.

An interesting story is associated with the picture, which Whistler painted in Paris in the late 90's. Some years before that Edmund H. Wuerpel, now director of St. Louis School of Fine Arts of Washington University, had met Whistler in Paris, and they became great friends.

Late in the 90's Wuerpel, who had returned to St. Louis, sent one of his pictures to Paris, offering it for exhibition in the annual salon. His friend Whistler was a member of the jury which chose pictures for that exhibition. It was customary, after the work of judging had been completed, to grant each of the jurors a favor, and usually the request was that one of the rejected pictures, one painted perhaps by the juror or one of his pupils, be included in the exhibition. Such favors were granted as a matter of course.

On this occasion, when Whistler had the opportunity to seek a favor, he told those in charge of the salon that the picture in which he was particularly interested had already been selected. "But I want it hung next to mine," he added. It was done.

The picture which Whistler wanted hung next to his was Wuerpel's. Whistler's own picture in that exhibition was the one which Washington University has just acquired. Wuerpel's picture, a marine moonlight study, done in the same spirit as Whistler's, but in a different tone, now hangs in his studio at the art school.

The Whistler shows three sailing ships riding the sea in the dusk, their lights casting reflections across the blue sheen of the water. In the distance there is a fourth ship, and an indistinct shore line.

The picture was sold to the university by Julius H. Weitzner, New York art dealer, who bought it last November from the collection of the late William H. Sage. Weitzner paid $12,000 for it. The resale price was not announced. At one time the picture was in the collection of Charles Tugustus Howell, private secretary to John Ruskin, and later it belonged to Mrs. Strindberg of London.

At present it is hung temporarily in one of the downstairs galleries at the museum, adjacent to the offices of the museum staff. It will be placed in a more conspicuous location later.

10 PCT. TO BONDHOLDERS

$1,841,470 to Go for Joint Stock Land Bank Liquidation.

A second liquidating payment of 10 per cent, totaling $1,841,470, will be made about Feb. 10 to bondholders of the St. Louis Joint Stock Land Bank, the receiver, S. L. Cantley, announced today. A payment of 20 per cent, $3,682,941, was made last summer.

The distribution, to be made out of proceeds of liquidation of pledged assets behind the farm loan bonds, represents 10 per cent of $18,414,500 in bonds plus 10 per cent of interest accrued up to June 1, 1932, date of receivership of the bank. Payment will be made to holders of receivership certificates on record at the close of business Jan. 25.

RUSSIAN DECIPHERS 4000-YEAR-OLD TABLET
Soviet Expert's Translation Said to Cast New Light on Biblical Stories.

MOSCOW, Jan. 15.—Fragments of ancient Phoenician Temple records, which Bolsheviks say cast new light on Biblical stories, were made public here today. A 4000-year-old tablet, discovered in Syria in 1930 by a French expedition, was deciphered by the Soviet Oriental language expert I. Ravrevy, from inscriptions previously believed to be untranslatable.

Particular importance was attached by Soviet students to a passage apparently referring to the deluge. As constructed by Ravrevy from the badly-damaged tablet it said:

"Baal opened the windows of Heaven. And with his voice Baal thundered. And Baal revealed his mysteries. He lighted the valleys and encircled the mountains.

"Baal's cyclone embraced the forests. It crackled and roared up to the edges of the valley.

"Said Alaan-Baal: 'The deluvium is raging. Do not fear, do not fear, we will restore you from the disasters.'"

Ravrevy said he thought the tablet had been inscribed 4000 years ago and referred to a period 1000 years before that.

The records were found, according to accounts published here, by French archeologists in the ruins of a temple unearthed at Ras Shamra, the site of ancient Phoenicia.

Differing from ancient writings, they remained untranslated until they were lent to the Russians and Ravrevy discovered the key to their meaning.

U. S. INQUIRY IN MINE BOMBINGS IN ILLINOIS

Two Progressive Union Officials Ordered to Appear Before Springfield Grand Jury.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 15.—An investigation of mine war bombings in Southern Illinois during the past three years is reported underway before a Federal grand jury here.

That Federal authorities had started an inquiry was indicated as a result of subpoenas issued for S. L. Jones, Belleville, State Secretary-Treasurer of the Progressive Miners of America, and John Taylor of Gillespie, chairman of the P. M. A. Relief Committee.

They were ordered to appear before the grand jury with all records of the union's relief fund expenditures from Dec. 1, 1932, to Sept. 30, 1935. The records were given to the grand jury today.

Jones and Taylor fought the subpoena before Federal Judge J. Earl Major. Arguing whether such evidence was material, Assistant U. S. District Attorney Marks P. Alexander asserted:

"This matter relates to bombings which have gone on in Southern Illinois for the past three years."

Judge Major overruled the motion to quash the subpoena. The grand jury made a partial report indicating that the jurors would be held over to hear testimony from Jones and Taylor and examine the records.

Because several trains carrying mail were bombed in recent months, interference with the Postal Service was regarded as one likely reason why the Government could make an investigation.

Alexander would not qualify his statement but asked Judge Major for "quick action," saying the matter was "very important."

The records subpoenaed, included those on disbursements and expenditures, cash payments for relief purposes, payrolls, expense accounts of agents and employees, bank statements and cancelled checks.

William Ickek of Gillespie, P. M. A. President; Lloyd Thrush of Peoria, State vice-president, and George Dowell of Du Quoin, legal counsel, accompanied Jones and Taylor.

"These men were summoned to appear and they came," Ickek declared. "We haven't the slightest idea what it is all about."

Several State grand juries have investigated the bombings with little action taken. Federal agents also were reported to have been active in investigating these cases about a year ago.

MRS. KATHERINE SNOODGRASS FUNERAL SET FOR TOMORROW

She Was Teacher in Public and Private Schools in City for Many Years.

Funeral services for Mrs. Katherine Snodgrass, a teacher in public and private schools in St. Louis for many years, who died yesterday at St. Mary's Hospital of complications following a brief illness, will be held at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow at the Alexander Chapel, 6175 Delmar boulevard. Burial will be in Bellefontaine Cemetery.

Mrs. Snodgrass was the widow of Alexander Snodgrass, an accountant, who died in 1915. She is survived by a daughter, Miss Catherine Snodgrass, with whom she lived at 4337 McPherson avenue, and two brothers and a sister.

SAYS REDUCED AUTO SPEED WON'T SOLVE SAFETY PROBLEM

Director of Harvard Bureau of Street Traffic Research Addresses Automobile Engineers.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 15.—Dr. Miller McClintock, director of the Bureau of Street Traffic Research at Harvard University, speaking before the convention of Automobile Engineers yesterday, recommended complete physical separation of traffic moving in opposite directions, instead of the painted center line; segregation of passenger cars and trucks; grade crossing elimination at intersections and lanes for deceleration.

Cities should reduce to a minimum on main roads approaches to parking lots and oil stations, he said.

Dr. McClintock said reduction of the speed of which automobiles are capable would not solve the safety problem. Not more than 7 per cent of fatal automobile accidents, he continued, were caused by speed of more than 50 miles an hour, and most of them would have been fatal at less speed.

INCREASE TO FIVE BILLIONS IN STORE TRADE ESTIMATED

Economist Says 1935 Sales of General Merchandise in U. S. Were Largest Since 1931.

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—It is estimated that in 1935 there was spent in the United States $5,121,694,000 for general merchandise, the largest expenditures since 1931. The estimate was made by A. W. Zelonek, economist of the International Statistical Bureau, Inc. This is an estimate of the amount spent in department stores, mail order houses and general and variety stores. In 1934 the expenditures were put at $4,772,469,000.

The 1935 increase in department store, mail order, general and variety store sales averaged 7.3 per cent, the mail order group leading with a rise of 21.5 per cent.

Department stores increased their business by 5.3 per cent and general merchandise by 7.4 per cent. The variety stores made the smallest increase, 1.3 per cent.

The showing of the 5-and-10 cent stores, Zelonek said, was least favorable.

WARNER EVIDENCE ON RECEIVERSHIP SUIT IS ADMITTED

Barred at Previous Conspiracy Trial, it Shows Harry Koplar Was Party to Action Against Firm.

The figure of Harry Koplar, veteran St. Louis movie exhibitor, has been brought into the trial of the Government's suit to enjoin Warner Bros., Paramount and R-K-O movie interests from withholding films from Fanchon & Marco's Ambassador, Missouri and Grand Central theaters.

Koplar's connection with Fanchon & Marco since they took over the theaters in August, 1934, was cited by an attorney for Warners as justification for not letting Fanchon & Marco have films. Warners kept not only their own supply of first-run pictures but obtained the supplies of R-K-O and Paramount.

While Spyros P. Skouras, head of the family which formerly operated the three theaters, was under cross-examination yesterday, Frederick H. Wood of New York, of counsel for Warners, introduced records of two 1931 receivership suits against Warners' local companies.

Objections by Special Assistant Attorney-General Russell Hardy were overruled by Federal Judge Joseph W. Molyneux. Wood explained that Skouras had testified to Koplar's association with Fanchon & Marco, and that the receivership case records showed Koplar was a party to those suits and instigated them.

Wood declared the suits constituted "vexatious litigation," charging Warners with gross misconduct of the business, and that while Koplar was finally defeated in them, receivers were in charge for more than two years.

"You are offering these to show that you were justified in not dealing with him," the judge inquired. "Yes, sir," said Wood.

Hardy argued that the litigation was not justification for the alleged conspiracy of the defendants in the injunction suit to withhold films, but that the facts showed a motive for Warners' refusal to deal with Fanchon & Marco.

The Court ruled the records were admissible. In the trial last autumn of a conspiracy charge against a similar group of defendants in the same matter, Federal Judge George H. Moore, barred the receivership suit records as incompetent. Defendants in the conspiracy case were acquitted.

"Lost Shirts" in Market.

Skouras testified, with evident reference to his brothers and himself: "We were among the unfortunate who lost their shirts in the stock market crash, and we had to go to work again." Now he is managing 337 Fox West Coast theaters and 50 theaters in the New York area.

Joseph H. Grand, attorney for the first mortgage bondholders' committee of the theater properties, followed Skouras on the stand, testifying about a conference at his office April 6, 1934, when reorganization was under way.

When the subject of a lease to the Fanchon & Marco-Koplar interests was brought up, Grand said, representatives of Warners declared: "Oh, no; you are not going to have Paramount and you are not going to have R-K-O. We are going to show those and you are going to have to show what is left."

ENDS HIS LIFE IN PARK

Frederick Fuhrmann, 68, Despondent Because of Poor Health.

Frederick Fuhrmann, 68 years old, 3009 Ohio avenue, ended his life yesterday in Tower Grove Park by firing a bullet into his head from a .38 caliber revolver.

His wife told police Fuhrmann had been despondent because ill health had kept him from working for several months at his job as a porter.

Barred at Previous Conspiracy Trial, it Shows Harry Koplar Was Party to Action Against Firm.

The figure of Harry Koplar, veteran St. Louis movie exhibitor, has been brought into the trial of the Government's suit to enjoin Warner Bros., Paramount and R-K-O movie interests from withholding films from Fanchon & Marco's Ambassador, Missouri and Grand Central theaters.

Koplar's connection with Fanchon & Marco since they took over the theaters in August, 1934, was cited by an attorney for Warners as justification for not letting Fanchon & Marco have films. Warners kept not only their own supply of first-run pictures but obtained the supplies of R-K-O and Paramount.

While Spyros P. Skouras, head of the family which formerly operated the three theaters, was under cross-examination yesterday, Frederick H. Wood of New York, of counsel for Warners, introduced records of two 1931 receivership suits against Warners' local companies.

"Vexatious Litigation." Objections by Special Assistant Attorney-General Russell Hardy were overruled by Federal Judge Joseph W. Moynihan. Wood explained that Skouras had testified to Koplar's association with Fanchon & Marco, and that the receivership case records showed Koplar was a party to those suits and instigated them.

Wood declared the suits constituted "vexatious litigation," charging Warners with gross misconduct of the business, and that, while Koplar was finally defeated in them, receivers were in charge for more than two years.

"You are offering these to show that you were justified in not dealing with him?" the judge inquired. "Yes, sir," said Wood.

Hardy argued that the litigation was not justification for the alleged conspiracy of the defendants in the injunction suit to withhold films, but that the facts showed a motive for Warners' refusal to deal with Fanchon & Marco.

The court ruled the records were admissible. In the trial last autumn of a conspiracy charge against a similar group of defendants in the same matter, Federal Judge George H. Moore, barred the receivership suit records as incompetent. Defendants in the conspiracy case were acquitted.

"Lost Shirts" in Market. Skouras testified, with evident reference to his brothers and himself: "We were among the unfortunate who lost their shirts in the stock market crash, and we had to go to work again." Now he is managing 357 Fox West Coast theaters and 50 theaters in the New York area.

Joseph H. Grand, attorney for the first mortgage bondholders' committee of the theater properties, followed Skouras on the stand, testifying about a conference at his office April 6, 1934, when reorganization was under way.

When the prospect of a lease to the Fanchon & Marco-Koplar interests to show first-run pictures was brought up, Grand said, representatives of Warners declared: "Oh, no; you are not going to have Paramount and you are not going to have R-K-O. We are going to show those and you are going to have to show what is left."

ENDS HIS LIFE IN PARK

Frederick Fuhrmann, 68, Despondent Because of Poor Health. Frederick Fuhrmann, 68 years old, 3009 Ohio avenue, ended his life yesterday in Tower Grove Park by firing a bullet into his head from a .23 caliber revolver.

His wife told police Fuhrmann had been despondent because ill health had kept him from working for several months at his job as a porter.

ADVERTISMENT

Pleasant Way to Relieve

HANGOVER

AFTER a party, take two Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. You'll wake up in the morning without a "head," if excess acidity is the cause. It's a fact, and here's the reason: When you drink too much, or eat too much, your stomach may become over-acid. This hyperacid condition often causes pain, sourness, headache, nausea. Unless it's relieved you're sure to wake up in the morning feeling like something has got dragged in. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets neutralize the excess acidity quickly—tend to put your stomach back to normal again. The Stuart formula contains Calcium Carbonate and other pure helpful ingredients. They're regarded as 2½ times more effective than soda. Perfectly harmless, and pleasant to take. Try them. A quarter buys the handy pocket size box. All drug stores. For FREE trial package write (post card will do) to F. A. Stuart Co., Dept. 4525, Marshall, Mich.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH GEORGE ALISON, CHARACTER ACTOR, DIES IN BROOKLYN

Came From England With the Kennells and Appeared With Many Famous Stars.
By the Associated Press.

NORWALK, Conn., Jan. 15. — George Alison, 70 years old, character actor, died last night at his home here.

Alison, a native of London, had appeared with Helen Hayes, Lynn Fontanne, William Farnum, Madge Kennedy and Ethel Barrymore. He came to this country in 1892 with the company of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Kendall. Later he was with Frohman companies and for 13 years played in stock companies in Brooklyn and Chicago and with William Farnum in "Ben Hur."

He appeared with Helen Hayes in one of her earlier plays, "Pollyanna," and was with her also in "Babs." He was leading man for Lynn Fontanne in "Dulcy," and appeared in "The Butter and Egg Man."

With his wife, Alison made a long tour with Madge Kennedy in "Michael and Mary." In the summers, they played in Stewart Walker companies in Cincinnati, O. Recently he had been seen in "Dinner at Eight" and "Merrily We Roll Along."

His widow, the former Susan Gertrude Pratt, and a daughter, Mrs. W. Richmond Arnold of Boston, survive.

SOCIAL SECURITY BOARD MAKES FIVE APPOINTMENTS

Selects Directors of Three Bureaus in Its Department, One of Them a Woman.
By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15. — The Social Security Board made five appointments today.

Murray W. Latimer of Mississippi, chairman of the Railroad Retirement Board, was chosen director of the Bureau of Old Age Benefits, which administers the part of the program handling benefits to all persons more than 65 years of age. He will continue as chairman of the Retirement Board.

R. Gordon Wagenet of Berkeley, Cal., was appointed director of the Bureau of Unemployment Compensation.

Miss Jane M. Hoey of New York was chosen head of the Public Assistance Bureau, which will administer grants to states for the aid of needy aged persons.

Louis Resnick of New York was made director of the Informational Service Bureau, and Robert E. Huse of Cambridge, Mass., his assistant. The Bureau will handle inquiries regarding the Social Security Act and the Library and Publications section of the board.

MUSSOLINI REPLACES STOLEN FIGURE OF CHILD AT ROME, GA.

One of Twins, Romulus and Remus, Taken by Thieves at Night Several Months Ago.
By the Associated Press.

ROME, Ga., Jan. 15.—Benito Mussolini has restored the missing figure of a child on a statue, the bronze figure of the mother wolf and the twins, Romulus and Remus, legendary founders of ancient Rome, which stands on a marble base in front of the Municipal Auditorium of this city, namesake of old Rome.

The statue is a copy of the one on Capitoline Hill in Rome, Italy, and was presented to Georgia's Rome by Mussolini in 1929 at the time this city was selected for a rayon plant by a group of Italian industrialists.

One morning, several months ago, one of the two children below the wolf's form, was missing. The thieves were never found. Mussolini had another figure cast to replace the missing one.

GEORGIA MAN KILLS HIS TWO DAUGHTERS AND SELF

General Agent of Insurance Company Uses Shotgun in Macon Home.
By the Associated Press.

MACON, Ga., Jan. 15.—Albert Adams Sr., 45 years old, general agent for the Prudential Life Insurance Co., shot and killed his two daughters at the family home in the Vineville section of Macon today and then fatally wounded himself, Macon police reported. The daughters, Helen, 8 years old, and Emma, 16, were killed instantly. Adams died shortly afterward in a Macon hospital.

Mrs. Adams said her husband was in good spirits last night and spent the evening playing cards with her and the two daughters.

WOMAN SUFFERS SKULL INJURY WHEN HIT BY AUTOMOBILE

Driver Takes Her Home, But Leaves Without Giving Name.
Miss Elizabeth Flynn, 60 years old, 751 North Euclid avenue, suffered a skull injury and brain concussion last night when struck by an automobile as she was crossing Delmar boulevard in the 5000 block.

The driver took Miss Flynn to her home and assisted her to the front porch. He left without giving his name.

In the 24 hours ended at 4 a. m. today there were 22 automobile accidents in the city. Fifteen persons were injured.

Boy and Girl Born Two Weeks Apart

POLKTON, N. C., Jan. 15. — Dr. J. M. Boyce reported today the birth of two children two weeks apart to Mrs. Clyde Sikes, farmer's wife of Burnsville Township in Anson County. Dr. Boyce said he was called to the Sikes' home Dec. 29 and a pound and a half boy, who lived only 55 hours, was born. The second child, a two-pound girl, was born Jan. 11.

The physician said the second child is doing as well as could be expected, adding the births were premature.

ADDITIONAL $10,000,000 FOR ILLINOIS WPA PROJECTS

State Relief Commission Reports Case Load Decreased by 79,138 Families in December.
By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 15.—Robert J. Dunham, state director of the Works Progress Administration, announced last night an additional $10,000,000 had been made available by the Federal Government for Illinois projects.

He said he had received a telegram from Carrington Gill, Assistant Federal Relief Administrator, advising him that the total WPA funds made available had been increased to $72,000,000.

"The additional funds will be used for the program now under way," Dunham stated. "Money will be allotted to present projects as is necessary in the progress of the work."

The State Emergency Relief Commission reported that its case load was decreased by 79,138 families in December.

In reporting the number of cases closed during December, the commission said that in addition to the $9,887 transferred to WPA, 6157 were closed because of private employment found, and 5036 because of other causes.

The addition of 22,942 new cases brought the net decrease to 79,138.

Aviation Supervisor Named. CHICAGO, Jan. 15.—The selection of Col. Edgar S. Gorrell, former head of the Stutz Motor Co., as supervisor of the country's air transport lines was announced yesterday. His election was voted at a meeting of the newly formed Air Transport Association of America. He will occupy a position in the air transport industry similar to that of Keweenaw Mountain Landis in baseball.

Wonderful Flavor in the Bag...
AND COSTS

11-O'CLOCK LET-DOWN BANISHED
"I used to start the day feeling pretty good—but I'd 'run-down' by 11:00 o'clock. It was a lucky day for me when you packed Dated Coffee in the inexpensive bag. Now I can afford to drink fresher coffee, I can work full steam ahead all morning."
Mrs. W. Leater, Boston, Mass.

HITTING ON ALL EIGHT—"I'm a garage mechanic and I like coffee that is coffee... with enough flavor and strength to stick by me. Dated Coffee has plenty of flavor, and, in the bag, the price suits me, too."
Robert Rockford, San Francisco, Cal.

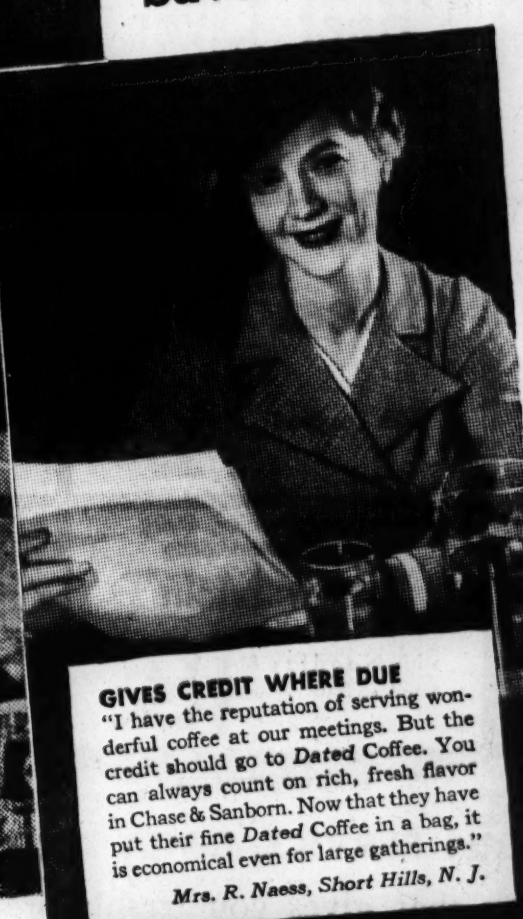

MAKES HER MORE
ALERT—"I find I do much better, quicker work now that I'm drinking Dated Coffee. Thanks to its inexpensiveness in the new bag, this fine fresh coffee comes within my budget."
Charlotte Bruckner, Chicago, Ill.

Save money and enjoy finer coffee

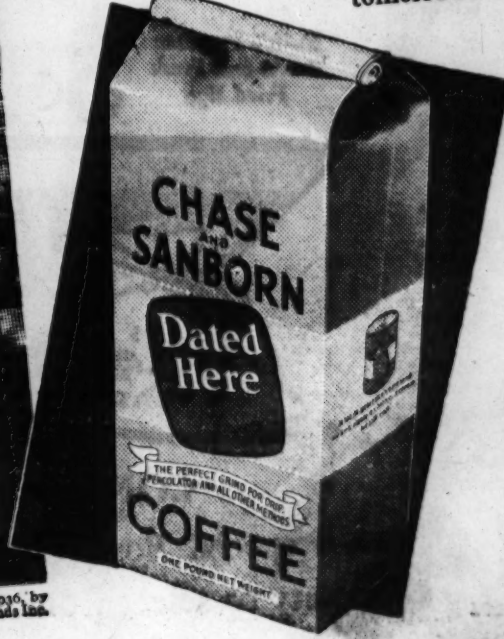

"MY HUSBAND AND I BOTH THINK DATED COFFEE IS GRAND—There's nothing like it for putting you in an agreeable mood. It's so deliciously fresh and cheering. It's a great help whenever we entertain—because it puts guests right in the party spirit. And we have Dated Coffee every day for ourselves. It gives us such a good start in the morning, and is a wonderful 'refresher' at dinner. We both like saving money on the Dated bag, too!"
Mrs. Henry T. Vance, Bronxville, N. Y.

GIVES CREDIT WHERE DUE
"I have the reputation of serving wonderful coffee at our meetings. But the credit should go to Dated Coffee. You can always count on rich, fresh flavor in Chase & Sanborn. Now that they have put their fine Dated Coffee in a bag, it is economical even for large gatherings."
Mrs. R. Naess, Short Hills, N. J.

DATED Coffee in the bag wins praise for quality, freshness and economy! The choicest coffees in the world give it flavor. And its freshness is guaranteed by our Dating Plan. Every bag is rushed to your grocer marked with the date of delivery. None stays on his shelves more than 10 days.

This means we can use an inexpensive bag. Buy a pound of delicious Chase & Sanborn Dated Coffee in the economical bag tomorrow!

OPERATION RELIEVES PROTRUDING EYES

California Surgeon Lectures to Medical Society and Shows Pictures.

An operation for removal of part of the bony framework of the eye-socket to relieve abnormal protrusion of the eyeball was described at a meeting of the St. Louis Medical Society last night in the annual Hodgen Lecture, given by Dr. Howard C. Naffziger, professor of surgery at the University of California.

Illustrating his lecture with lantern slides of patients who had undergone the operation, Dr. Naffziger said the method had proved encouragingly successful so far. After the operation, he pointed out, the eyeball receded to a normal or approximately normal position and in cases where the eyesight had been affected normal or virtually normal conditions were restored.

Most of the cases described by Dr. Naffziger were ones in which the abnormal protrusion, known to the medical profession as exophthalmus, had become so aggravated as to affect the patient's eyesight, following surgical removal of the thyroid gland.

In the operation, he said, entrance was made through the skull just back of the hair line, exposing the framework of the eye-socket. Then part of the framework was removed, he said, to reduce tension on the eyeball, caused by inflammatory swelling of surrounding tissues.

Dr. Naffziger was enrolled as an honorary member of the Medical Society. The meeting was sponsored by the St. Louis Surgical Society and the Medical Fund Society.

The annual lecture was established to honor Dr. J. T. Hodgen, pioneer St. Louis surgeon. Dr. J. T. Hodgen of Detroit, grandson of the noted St. Louis surgeon, attended last night's meeting.

TELLS OF BENEFITS RESULTING FROM RULES GOVERNING BAR

T. F. McDonald, Head of St. Louis Association, Addresses Madison County Lawyers.

Benefits both to the legal profession and the public resulting from adoption by the Missouri Supreme Court 14 months ago of a plan for governing the bar were described to the Madison County Bar Association at Alton last night by Thomas F. McDonald, president of the St. Louis Bar Association.

Bestowal of the annual St. Louis Award of $1000 on the St. Louis Bar Association for outstanding service to the community, McDonald said, brought strikingly to the attention of the public the high character of activities of the majority of lawyers as contrasted with previous publicity concerning unethical conduct of the minority.

The Supreme Court's new rules for governing the bar, he said, gave increased powers for discipline of unprofessional lawyers, raised the standards for admission to the bar and, through a Judicial Council of 11 members, opened the way for a simplified and more elastic judicial system, improving procedure and lessening delay.

FRIEDA HEMPEL FILES SUIT AGAINST AUGUST HECKSCHER

Said to Be Seeking Payments From Trust Fund Set Up for Her in 1928.

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—The Daily News says that a Supreme Court suit filed yesterday disclosed that August Heckscher, elderly millionaire real estate dealer, set up a trust fund of $500,000 in 1928, of which $15,000 was to be paid annually to Frieda Hempel, German opera star.

The newspaper said that the suit was filed by Miss Hempel against Heckscher and the two alleged trustees of the fund instituted for her benefit, Elias Stuckles and William D. Hart.

She alleged that annual payments from the fund in quarterly installments were received until Dec. 1, 1935, when they stopped. Reasons for establishment of the fund were not advanced in the suit, the newspaper stated.

At one time Heckscher announced his engagement to Miss Hempel. She was formerly the wife of William B. Kahn.

BERNARR MACFADDEN SPEAKS

Assails Roosevelt but Doesn't Mention Own Candidacy.

Bernarr Macfadden of New York, magazine publisher and former wrestler, addressed a mass meeting in Convention Hall of Municipal Auditorium last night. Advance advertising of the meeting referred to him as a seeker for the Republican nomination for President.

He did not say that he would be a presidential candidate, but he delivered a political speech, attacking the Roosevelt administration. Philip H. Brockman, former president of the Police Board, introduced Macfadden and William Sacks, Republican politician, presided.

WABASH TO PAY BOND INTEREST

Trustees Authorized to Disburse $349,825 Feb. 1.

COL. ROOSEVELT ATTACKS FEDERAL SPENDING POLICY

Says Administration Is "Squandering Heritage of Children; Destroying Governmental Structure."

By the Associated Press. OMAHA, Neb., Jan. 15.—Col. Theodore Roosevelt said here last night that the administration of President Roosevelt is "squandering the heritage of our children" and is making "a deliberate and concerted attempt to return to the spoils system."

He spoke at a meeting sponsored by the Abraham Lincoln Republican Club.

"The national administration," he said, "is squandering the heritage of our children, binding on their backs a burden of debt under which they must stagger all their lives and destroying the Governmental structure which will insure them an opportunity in life."

Referring to the "return of the spoils system," Col. Roosevelt said the first step was the "creation of 40 new bureaus," followed by a direct and systematic assault on positions in existence by civil service.

"We must stand up and fight now or we will find opportunity and liberty outcasts from our land," "and our people goose-stepping at the commands of a dictator."

KILLS HIMSELF WITH RAZOR

Isaac Liebaart, 77, Despondent Because of Loss of Job.
Isaac Liebaart, 77 years old, 4049 Winnebago street, ended his life yesterday by cutting his throat with a razor in the back yard of his home.
His wife told police he had been despondent lately because another man had taken his job as porter for a candy company.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 15.—The Butler University Student Council petitioned the faculty yesterday to establish a course in "sex hygiene" next semester.

DISPUTES GREEN'S STATEMENT ON CHILD LABOR INCREASE

Sterling E. Edmunds Cites Surveys Indicating Reduced Employment in Two States.
Sterling E. Edmunds, director of the National Committee for Protection of Child, Family, School and Church, which has opposed efforts of the National Child Labor Committee to obtain a Federal child-labor amendment, issued a statement last night contradicting an assertion by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, that there has been an increase in child labor since termination of the NRA.
Edmunds said surveys in New Jersey and North Carolina indicated decreasing employment of child labor in silk and textile mills. According to the national 1930 census, he said, only 4761 children under 14 and 63,505 under 15 were employed in manufacturing and mechanical industries.

CRAZED MOTHER BEATS 3 CHILDREN TO DEATH

Attacks Them as They Sleep at West Chester, Pa.—Tries to Strangle Self.

By the Associated Press.
WEST CHESTER, Pa., Jan. 15.—Apparently deranged, Mrs. Joseph Oberle beat her three children to death with a three-foot pinch bar while they slept early today, and then tried to kill herself.
The tragedy was discovered by Dr. S. Leroy Barber after he had been called to the Oberle home by Mrs. Oberle who screamed into the telephone, "I just killed them."
The dead: Mary Oberle, 17 years old; Louise Oberle, 9; Joseph Oberle, 7.
The skulls of all were crushed. The older girl was in one room and the two younger children in another. Mrs. Oberle was removed to a hospital in a serious condition.
She was alone in the home with the children overnight. Her husband, who is head of the Chester County Farm Extension Association, was in State College, Pa., on a business trip. Neighbors said the family had moved to the house shortly before Christmas.
Dr. Barber found Mrs. Oberle on the dining room floor, with a telephone cord twisted tightly about her neck.

15,000 FINNISH FAMILIES CHANGE 'SWEDISH' NAMES

Part of Campaign to Have Nation's Language 'Pure'; Act Described as Voluntary.
By the Associated Press.
HELSINGFORS, Finland, Jan. 15.—Nearly 15,000 Finnish families of Swedish descent have adopted Finnish names as a New Year gesture towards developing Finnish nationalism. Municipal and registry clerks are working overtime to deal with applications to drop old Swedish names in favor of Finnish.
Although the change is entirely voluntary, since Swedish and Finnish are both official languages, it has been prompted by the intensive propaganda for a "pure" Finnish tongue.
The very use of the Swedish language, dating back to days when Finland was conquered and ruled by Sweden, has been the subject of agitation. Finnish has now supplanted Swedish as the instruction language at Helsingfors University. Towns and villages are being renamed. Finnish students are especially active in the campaign to eradicate the dual language system.
How to find sufficient new family names is proving a problem and in many cases the Swedish name is merely being lengthened through a Finnish ending. This is proving confusing to postal authorities.
Swedish names still abound among high government officials, however, while many industrial leaders, the majority of whom are Swedish, have yet to join the procession to the registry office.

SIXTH DEATH IN FAMILY FROM POPLAR BLUFF FIRE

Father Is Victim, Together With Mother and Four Small Children.
POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., Jan. 15.—A family of six was burned to death in a small farm home near here yesterday. The father, Poy Willard, died in a hospital late in the day. His wife, Mrs. Virginia Willard, and their four small children were also killed in the explosion of a can of oil being used to start a fire. The children were John, 7 years old; Andy, 5; Jimmy, 3, and Claude, 2.
Willard said the fuel had been taken from a natural gas pipeline concentration point near his home.

BANK CLERK SUES TO DIVORCE FORMER ANNE GOULD, HEIRRESS

Frank Spencer Meador and She Elopel Christmas Night, 1934; He Was an Actor Then.
By the Associated Press.
SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Jan. 15.—Frank Spencer Meador, a bank clerk, has filed suit for divorce from Anne Gould Meador.
He said difference between San Antonio's "limited social life" and New York's gay whirl caused the disagreement.
Meador and Miss Gould eloped from New York City Christmas night, 1934, and were married in a registry office at Harrison, N. Y. Meador was then an actor, with a role in "Yellow Jack."

Summary: Score at end of half—St. Louis 18, Rockhurst 13.
Referee—Douglas (Grinnell). Umpire—Davidson (St. Louis U.).

By James M. Gould.

At odd times when St. Louis University's Billikens decide to play straight basketball and not, while engaged in that game, bits of football, rouge, code-ball-on-the-green and field hockey, they reveal real knowledge of the game. Prof. Nal-smith invented, and the results are most gratifying. Last night, opposed by Rockhurst College of Kansas City, the Billikens took their basketball "straight" and by clever and, sometimes, amazing teamwork, won handsily by a score of 35 to 25. Only once before this season have the Billikens exceeded their last night's point total—they counted 37 against Missouri—and, in no previous game did they even approach the real basketball form they displayed against Coach Pat Mason's Hawks. In contrast to much of the play seen here this season, last night's contest was pure basketball. The Billikens had to hustle to win, and they had to be good to win. They did the one and were the other.

Fash Stars Out.
Captain Herb Fash starred, shone, scintillated and glowed. To reduce it to a common denominator, the Billiken floor leader played a great game. To the St. Louis total Fash contributed 19 points, and seven field goals and five successful free throws. Fash scored 12 points in the first period, one less than the Rockhurst total in that half. Only one other player—Keaney of St. Louis—scored more than five points. He collected seven.

However, Fash's teammates were in no small way responsible for his excellent showing, as they fed him constantly and accurately all evening. Every Billiken deserves a part of the honor accruing from the fine performance, with Mike Ryan standing out a bit for his all-around play.

Rockhurst started with a rush, when Taxson caged two from the floor in the first minute. The visitors were in command for the first 10 minutes and once held a 9-4 lead. However, Fash started operations at this point and single-handedly scored eight points. The count was tied at 9-9 after 11 minutes of play and Fash's free throw sent the Billikens into the lead at 12 minutes.

Rockhurst rallied briefly to go ahead, 13 to 12, but field goals by Fash, Ryan, Mattie, and Keaney erased that lead and, thereafter, the Billikens never relinquished their point-advantage, the half ending, 18 to 13.

Cagle sank two from the floor to start the Billikens off in the second half and the scoring for a few minutes was about evenly divided until a St. Louis rush sent the count to 29-17 after eight minutes of battling. Rockhurst refused to quit and, with a scoring flurry, climbed to within six points of a tie with only three and a half minutes of play remaining. However, it was only a flurry for the Billikens wouldn't be stampeded and increased their lead to 10 points by the time the final siren wailed.

It was the seventh game and the fourth victory of the season for Mike Nyikos' team. Last Saturday night, the Billikens played their eighth game opposing the strong Loyola University team of Chicago.

One of the Best.
While only about 600 saw the game, the general opinion was that, as an exhibition of real basketball, last night's game was "top" for the season. The game was exceptionally well-handled by Ben Douglas and Eddie Davidson. Davidson was impressed into service when one official failed to appear.

In a preliminary game, the Billiken freshmen trounced Delta Xi, intra-mural champions, by a score of 25 to 13. It was the second victory for the youngsters in two games played.

Coach Pat Mason of Rockhurst hazarded the opinion that the varsity game was pretty rough last night but, from the sidelines, it didn't seem so. There were 22 fouls called but none of the players showed any signs of having been bitten or anything like that.

Coach Nyikos used 11 players and the team which finished up was composed entirely of reserves. Rockhurst employed nine men.

TENDS TO HIS KNITTING: Leg's Okay Now, Says Terry Moore

—By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer.

Injured two weeks before the end of the 1935 season, Terry Moore, Cardinal centerfielder, has put in the off-season getting back in shape for 1936, and now says he will be ready for the opening gong. At top, Terry is shown at his daily grind on the rowing machine at the Downtown Y. M. C. A.; below, at left, tossing the medicine ball, and, at right, the "daily" mile on the running track.

Terry Moore, in Training, Is Confident Leg Injury Will Not Take Away Any of His Speed
By J. Roy Stockton.

Terry Buford Moore, the fleet-footed young man who made himself a regular in the Cardinal outfield last season, his first in the big league, has been working out daily at the Downtown Y. M. C. A., and is confident that the fractured leg which put him on the shelf during the late weeks of the pennant race will not handicap him in any way.

Moore was injured trying to year's training camp. Frisch announced that the young man would be his regular center fielder. Terry had trouble with big league pitching for a while, but he had a good year in the minors, occasionally being benched for a day or two in the hope of bolstering the club's attack. But Moore's fielding was so brilliant that the club was noticeably weaker defensively when he was out of the lineup and Frisch quickly put him back in center field and told him he was going to stay there. About a month and a half before the season's close, Terry suddenly found his batting eye.

During an Eastern trip he battled over .500 and his hits included many extra base blows. "No, I didn't change my style or learn anything," he replied when asked about his sudden development as a batter. "I just started to meet the ball and it seemed for a time that all I had to do was meet it and I'd have a base hit. It was during that stretch that I got my six for six (the ball player's way of saying six hits in six times at bat)."

"I believe Frisch helped me when he stuck me up in the lead-off position. I figured he must think I was some good or he wouldn't put me there, it seemed to give me confidence and it was right then I started hitting the ball. Frisch certainly has a way of keeping your confidence up. No matter how bad I was going—and in the early months I had a batting average that would have warranted a trip back to the minors—he kept telling me not to worry about that, to keep on plugging and that he knew I could hit. He also impressed me with the necessity of bearing down in the field, no matter what kind of luck I was having at bat. So I went out every day determined to help save a game with my fielding if I couldn't do much up there with my bat. Not having been in the business long, I can't qualify as an expert on managers, but I'll take Frisch for mine."

His Loss Hurt Team.
Baseball followers have asked if "Terry" was young Moore's nickname, but it is his official handle. He was named Buford after an uncle and his brother Frank, a golf professional, is responsible for the name Terry.

"I was born in Memphis, May 27, 1912," Moore explained, "and for no good reason I was named Terry after the biggest gambler in Birmingham. The day I was born, Frank happened to see this man, Chaminade's outstanding athlete, Gene Staphenhorst, tossed in three one-hand shots in the first half to give his team a commanding lead that enabled it to stave off a last-half rally by Central Catholic High school of East St. Louis and win 19-6 yesterday afternoon at Chaminade. The victory gave Chaminade the lead in the Catholic Basketball League, the defeat being the first of the season for the East Siders and the second triumph without defeat for the Red Devils.

Central Catholic, victor in its three previous league contests, was unable to accustom itself to the playing floor and tallied only four points in the first half, not scoring a point in the second quarter, although taking many shots.

In the third period, Central held Chaminade to a single point while scoring six and pulled up to 14-10. In the first minute of the last quarter, Tom Hoffmann and Bob Halder scored on shots from short center to tie the count. Two minutes later, Roy Wolff, with his back to the basket, swung around and slung the ball through the hoop to tie the score. Scurry duplicated his feat to tie the score once more.

Then Staphenhorst sank a free throw and Donley a basket from the field to give Chaminade its winning margin.

In other games yesterday, Fairview won its first game in the Suburban League by defeating Affton, 34-18; Ritenour took a 36-31 game from Wellston; and Principia outscored Wellston 23-15.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 15.—Lefty Grove, Boston Red Sox pitcher, predicted today the coming pennant drive will find him better than last year when he topped the American League's pitchers for earned runs.

The number one comeback of 1935, arriving here after signing a new contract for next season, which is reported to carry a salary boost, said he's near the peak of condition even now.

"Because of the accident to my arm in 1934, I could take no chances last year, and always had to be careful," he said. "But now that it's strong again, I'll be able to hit it up harder this year."

For the Red Sox in general, the fireball artist saw even brighter possibilities. With the purchase of Jimmy Fox, Doc Cramer and Eric McNair from the Philadelphia Athletics, Lefty believes the Sox are "tops."

"We ought to be right in the thick of the pennant fight," he said.

whose first name was Terry, and which came home and found he had a new brother he said, "Let's call him Terry. And that's what they did. As I say, there was no good reason for it, because mine wasn't a gambling family and we didn't know the gambler, except by reputation."

It will mean much to the Cardinals to have Moore back in center field, with his speed unimpaired. He lived up to his minor league reputation as a brilliant fly-chaser. At Columbus he was described by the scouts as being able to cover "a field and a half." The loss of his services during the last two weeks of the season was a costly blow and had much to do with the loss of the league championship.

After his injury several games were lost because hits that Terry could have caught with ease, dropped in safe territory.

DEB MOINES, Ia., Jan. 15.—Washington travel-weary Bears dropped a ragged, hard fought Missouri Valley Conference basketball game to Drake, 1935 co-champions, by a 36 to 25 score here last night. It was the Bears' second league defeat against two victories.

The Bears, paced by the husky Dwight Haffel, gave the Bulldogs a bitter fight for nearly three-fourths of the first half only to have Drake spurt ahead 18 to 12 at intermission.

Washington pulled up to within four points after five minutes of play in the second half, but the Bulldogs swept through the tired Bears' defense for a comfortable margin near the end.

Haffel and Roy Martinotti, Conference scoring leader last year, provided the greatest problems for the veteran Drake team. The former, particularly, was a menace. He looped in four field goals and two free throws for the scoring honors on his club.

Drake Off to Fast Start.
Forrest Swan, husky Bulldog center, led the Des Moines quintet in the scoring column. Three times he hit from underneath the basket, and twice more he fired in baskets from long range.

Drake opened the game with field goals by Chuck Orebrough and Swan in the first 45 seconds, bewildering the Washington defense with a fast passing attack that sent the shooters into open space.

Tom Oment and Haffel then went to work to give the Bears a 6 to 4 lead, one of the two times they led during the game. Oment pushed a shot through from short range and Haffel cannied two long tosses.

Drake came right back to the front on a basket and a free throw by Billy McCloud. Haffel sank a free throw, but Swan got his second field goal seconds later. Haffel was the only player to receive as much as $17,500, which was a few times more than Billy Evans, business manager of the Cleveland club, drew.

Our Mr. Hornsby was a $15,000 man and Dixie Dean had not yet risen above the $12,500 figure.

These figures indicate that the executive and managerial departments of the national game in 1934 were far better rewarded on the whole than the men who make baseball possible—the players.

First Base All-Time Team; Timers Are Named

Clark Griffith who with Connie Mack and the Gay Nineties, bragged about his old three of them would be on his all-time player but that he'd rather have Ewing play for him.

Mickey Cochrane, catcher and manager of the Detroit Tigers, is the only present-day performer to win Griffith's recognition.

His all-time team would also include Walter Johnson—"the greatest of them all," and Christy Mathewson, pitchers; George Slater at first base, Larry Lajoie at second, Hans Wagner at shortstop, Home Run Baker at third, and Babe Ruth, Tris Speaker and Ty Cobb in the outfield.

One of the few able to present a nineteenth century all-star aggregation from personal acquaintance, Griffith said such a team would have Rubeen, Young, Russle and John Clarkson as pitchers, Ewing and Kelly as catchers, Anson at first base, John Ward at second, Herman Long at shortstop, and John McGraw at third, with Bill Lange, Willie Keeler and Ed Deleahanty in the outfield.

"Those old timers were a great crowd and what they would have done to the fast ball of today," he said.

BOWLING NOTES

The annual tournament for women bowling captains will be held at the St. Anthony Bowling Alley, Feb. 1 and 2. In addition to first prize, the winner will be awarded a diamond medal. For information call Ben Exler, Riverside 9971.

The Calcester Tavern will go into the second half of their match with the Calcester Regulars Sunday at the Century Club. The feature match will be represented by H. Fulbright, J. Unland, B. Hoyer, G. Davis and C. Mulligan, with the Hammers showing C. Younger, J. Stuber, M. Frank, A. Graef and L. Hammer.

All matches in the Newspaper League at Rogers Recreation resulted in 3-1 victories, the Stars taking the Sport 3-1, the feature match. The Post-Dispatch Annex winning from the Wray's Columns, the Moon Mullens beating the Popeys and the Stars winning from the Apple Marys. The Stars turned in a 2-2-2 series with Bud Rice collecting 645 and Bob Voz 604. "Piano Leg" Fuchs had 552 to top the balance. The only other 600 total registered was scored by L. Mattern, who hit 628 with a high single of 254 for the Stars.

Results in the Electrical Board of Trade League at Fuser's Del-Mar alley: Matthews 2, Busmann 1; James 2, Appletons 1; Utility 2, Kearney 1; Westinghouse 2, Glaseco 1; Becker 2, Ois 1; McIntyre, Generals 1, Mocker was the best individual with a 829 series, closely followed by Oscar Wild, who had 624. Goerlich had a 598 for the Appletons.

The Zukers hold a one-game lead over the Zumbels in the Greater St. Louis League at the Welton Recreation. They won 39 games while losing 18. The Auto Parts and Square Deals are tied for third, each team winning 33 games. The Hamiltons are on top in the National League with 37 games won and 13 lost. The Welltons are second with 29 victories and the Kats team, third with 27.

ST. LOUIS RUGBY TEAM

SETS SEASON'S PLANS

At a meeting of the St. Louis Rugby Union today, called by President Robert E. Scannell, plans were set for the coming season. Practice will start the last part of February and it is expected that the league will be composed of three teams.

A home-and-home arrangement with Chicago teams will be scheduled with two Chicago eleven playing a doubleheader here and two St. Louis teams going to Chicago. The local league hopes to play its practice games on the drill grounds in Forest Park.

In addition to Scannell, officers elected were Harry Langenberg Jr., treasurer, and Dr. E. Van Dusen, secretary. Those interested in trying out for the rugby squad may get in touch with Scannell at 419 Paul Brown building.

KNOCK OUT COLDS IN FIRST ROUND

Give Colds No Chance to Wear You Down and Put You on Your Back!

Don't dally with a cold! It may end seriously—in the form of flu or pneumonia.

When a cold strikes, strike back with redoubled force. Depend on no makeshift remedies.

A cold calls for a cold treatment, not a preparation good for all kinds of ailments.

A cold also calls for internal treatment, for a cold is an internal infection.

Make Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine your treatment and you have hit a cold a body blow. Bromo Quinine is effective because it is a cold tablet made expressly for the treatment of colds and nothing else. It routes colds quickly because it is internal treatment, fourfold in effect.

First, it opens the bowels, an advisable step in treating a cold. Second, it checks the infection in the system, a vital measure.

Third, it relieves the headache and fever.

Fourth, it tones the system and helps fortify against further attack.

Be wise and play safe! At the first sign of a cold go right to your druggist for a package of Bromo Quinine. Begin taking the tablets at once, two every four hours.

In 24 hours, if taken promptly, Bromo Quinine will often check a cold.

Bromo Quinine contains nothing harmful and is safe to take. When you ask for it, insist upon getting what you ask for. The few pennies' cost may save you a lot of worry and money.

PERMANENT AUTO LICENSES

Year Numeral to Be Changed in Connecticut.

By the Associated Press.

HARTFORD, Conn., Jan. 15.—Permanent license plates for automobiles will be available in Connecticut after March 1, 1937. Car owners will keep the same number indefinitely, a tag designating the year being inserted annually. A similar system is in effect in Florida.

Connecticut motor vehicle officials say the annual saving involved is estimated at $125,000.

JAPAN'S NAVAL ENVOYS QUIT
LONDON PARLEYDecision Follows Flat Refusal of Other Delegates to Consider Demand for Fleet Equality.NO OTHER CHOICE, NAGANO ASSERTSConferees From Other Four Powers to Meet Tomorrow to Consider Continuing Sessions.By the Associated Press.
LONDON, Jan. 15.—Japanese delegates tonight announced the withdrawal from the International Naval Conference.Japan's withdrawal followed formal rejection of Japanese demands for naval parity.The withdrawal, signifying the end of the five-power discussions seeking to effect an agreement on naval limitation to replace the expiring Washington and London treaties, was announced following a "showdown" session of the conference.The discussions have been deadlocked on a Japanese demand for fleet equality and a "common upper limit" of tonnage.The flat refusal to discuss Japanese demands for equality in naval strength was read to the conference by Norman Davis, U. S. delegate to the conference.He set forth the United States Government's conviction that the "principle of a common upper limit it would not serve as a basis for negotiation and agreement."This principle has been insisted on by the Japanese delegation as the basis of any discussion for a new naval treaty.U. S. Rejects Proposal.
"The United States is unable to accept the principle of the common upper limit as the basis for an agreement," Davis added.The four other Powers—Great Britain, the United States, Italy and France—expect to meet tomorrow to agree on opening a new four-power parley without the Japanese.Authoritative sources, however, said any such move would be virtually an idle gesture, since any four-power agreement must provide for the uncertainties of Japan's future building plans.Admiral Osami Nagano, the chief Japanese delegate, told newspapermen:"Since other delegations have made it clear they cannot accept our proposal for a common upper limit, no other choice is left for us than to leave the conference."The statement also declared the Japanese have not the slightest desire to embark on a naval race, and will "promote the cause of world peace by assiduously cultivating the best friendly relations with other nations."Nagano's statement continued:
"In view of the present state of remarkable developments in warships, aircraft and other weapons of war, existing naval treaties which not only admit disparity of naval strengths among Powers but also permit retention of offensive arms no longer can afford us security for national defense."For Cut in Offensive Arms.
"To attain an equilibrium of defense, there must be as a matter of principle equality on naval strength among Powers."This is most obvious in the case of nations who are separated by oceans and whose mutual relations of defense primarily are dependent on their navy."Nagano urged the Powers to abolish or drastically reduce offensive arms and provide for defensive arms "best suited to their defensive requirements."Under the Washington and London treaties, Japan is limited to three-fifths of the total naval strength of either the United States or Great Britain.Text of Davis' Address Released at at the State Department here.The Japanese have proposed that this conference establish a level for naval armaments which no contracting Power might exceed.

They express the hope that the agreed limit should be set so low as to require substantial reductions by Japan," said Davis."We believe it has been sufficiently shown in the course of our discussions that equality of naval armaments not only is not the same as equality of security, but that the

For Quick Cough Relief, Mix This Remedy at Home

No Cooking! No Work! Real Saving!

You'll never know how quickly a bad winter cough can be relieved, until you try this famous recipe. It is used in more homes than any other cough remedy, because it gives more prompt, positive results than any other. At all to mix and costs but a trifle.
Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. Syrup is easily made with 2 cups of sugar and one cup of water, stirred a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. This gives you four times as much cough medicine for your money, and it's a much better remedy. It never spoils and tastes fine.
Instantly you feel its penetrating effect. It loosens the phlegm, helps clear the air passages, and soothes the irritated membranes. This three-fold action explains why it brings such quick relief in winter coughs.Pinex is a concentrated compound of Norway Pine, famous for its soothing effect on throat membranes. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.MEN'S $2.49

U. S. Vice Consul at Havana and Bride

MR. and MRS. WALTER N. WALMSLEY JR.
PLACING the ring on the finger of his bride, Mrs. Marcia Teresa Rennett, recently divorced Spanish woman, at their marriage in Miami, Fla., yesterday.This number voted in support of the proposition that:(1) I believe as a Christian I should bear arms in, or otherwise support no war which the United States Government may declare.The Five Proposals.
This was the fifth and last of the positions set forth on the ballot.
The first four were support of the Government in war under various circumstances. The five proposals, and the vote and percentage for each, were:(1) I believe as a Christian I should bear arms in, or otherwise support any war which the United States Government may declare. Vote, 10,301, or 6 per cent.(2) I believe as a Christian I should bear arms in, or otherwise support any war declared by an internationally recognized aggressor. Vote, 5751, or 4 per cent.(3) I believe as a Christian I should bear arms in, or otherwise support only a war declared by the United States Government after making utmost use of every agency for peace. Vote, 69,888, or 42 per cent.(4) I believe as a Christian I should bear arms in, or otherwise support only a war in which United States territory has been invaded. Vote, 55,087, or 33 per cent.(5) I believe as a Christian I should bear arms in, or otherwise support no war which the United States Government may declare. Vote, 24,667, or 15 per cent.Obviously, those who voted for
No. 1, No. 2 or No. 3 would also vote to support a war to repel invasion, though they would not limit themselves by the word "only," as did those who voted for No. 4.
It is therefore correct to add the votes and percentages of the first four propositions, giving a total of 141,027, or 85.12 per cent, who would support the Government in repel-ling invasion.In the same way, it is permissible to add the votes and percentages of Nos. 1, 2 and 3, giving a total of 85,940, or 51.88 per cent, who would support the Government in a war, not necessarily to repel invasion, but following upon the "utmost use of every agency for peace."Council's Interpretation.
The Council for Social Action, in its announcement of the vote, takes the last division, approximately 62 to 48 per cent in favor of supporting the Government, as the significant one. It says: "Since the prospects of invasion in the near future are very slight, it would seem that the Government can expect little war support from approximately one-half of those voting in this plebiscite."The vote was taken in the Congregational-Christian churches on and after Armistice Sunday, Nov.
10. Distribution of ballots was not limited to actual members, and non-members more than 15 years of age attending church on that day, or receiving ballots from those who attended, were permitted to vote.
Of those voting, 43 per cent were males. As to ages, 19 per cent of those voting were from 15 to 20 years old; 23 per cent from 21 to 35; 26 per cent from 36 to 50; and 23 per cent 51 and over. About 5 per cent of the vote was from Negro and foreign-language congregations.The pacifist position, No. 5, appealed more strongly to women than to men. Of the women less than 35 years old voting, 19 per cent voted for No. 5; of women over 35, 16 per cent; of men less than 35, 14 per cent; and of men more than 35, 10 per cent. Occu-ationally, the pacifist position was supported by 18 per cent of the professional persons voting; 16 per cent of those engaged in agriculture; 14 per cent of those in clerical employment; and 9 per cent of those in the business-finance group.Seven Other Proposals.
The ballot also included seven proposals, which the voters were asked to approve or disapprove, as means of working for peace. These, with the yes and no votes on each, were:Membership in League of Nations. Yes, 70,411. No, 89,661.International consultation in support of Kellogg pact and other peace agreements. Yes, 134,221. No, 18,851.

National isolation through strict neutrality legislation. Yes, 83,682.

No, 54,756.More equal distribution of world resources and markets. Yes, 121, 581. No, 22,956.A larger army, navy and air force.
Yes, 64,432. No, 85,585.Abolition of compulsory military training (aimed at the R. O. T. C.).
Yes, 96,250. No, 54,884.Government control of the munis-tions industry. Yes, 144,030. No, 18,847.This plebiscite was the largest poll thus far taken on questionsrelating to peace sentiment in the United States. The largest previous vote of the kind, in the United States, was a poll of students taken by the Literary Digest last year.
In the student poll, in which about 125,000 votes were cast, 16 per cent took the extreme pacifist position of supporting no war.NO-TRUE BILL VOTED IN DEATH

JAPAN'S NAVAL ENVOYS QUIT LONDON PARLEY

Decision Follows Flat Refusal of Other Delegates to Consider Demand for Fleet Equality.

NO OTHER CHOICE, NAGANO ASSERTS

Conferees From Other Four Powers to Meet Tomorrow to Consider Continuing Sessions.

By the Associated Press. LONDON, Jan. 15.—Japanese delegates tonight announced their withdrawal from the International Naval Conference.

Japan's withdrawal followed formal rejection of Japanese demands for naval parity.

The withdrawal, signifying the end of the five-power discussions seeking to effect an agreement on naval limitation to replace the expiring Washington and London treaties, was announced following a "showdown" session of the conference.

The discussions have been deadlocked on a Japanese demand for fleet equality and a "common upper limit" of tonnage.

The flat refusal to discuss Japanese demands for equality in naval strength was rejected by the conference by a vote of 10 to 4.

He set forth the United States Government's conviction that the "principle of a common upper limit" would not serve as a basis for negotiation and agreement.

This principle has been insisted on by the Japanese delegation as the basis of any discussion for a new naval treaty.

"The United States is unable to accept the principle of the common upper limit as the basis for an agreement," Davis added.

The four other powers—Great Britain, the United States, Italy and France—expect to meet tomorrow to agree on opening a new four-power parley without the Japanese.

Authoritative sources, however, said any such move would be virtually an idle gesture, since any four-power agreement must provide for the uncertainties of Japan's future building plans.

Admiral Otsu Nagano, the chief Japanese delegate, told newspapermen: "Since other delegations have made it clear they cannot accept our proposal for a common upper limit, no other choice is left for us than to leave the conference."

The statement also declared the Japanese have not the slightest desire to embark on a naval race, and will "promote the cause of world peace by assiduously cultivating the best friendly relations with other nations."

Nagano's statement continued: "In view of the present state of remarkable developments in warships, aircraft and other weapons of war, existing naval treaties which not only admit disparity of naval strength among powers but also permit retention of offensive arms no longer can afford us security for national defense."

For cut in offensive arms. "To attain an equilibrium of defense, there must be as a matter of principle equality on naval strength among powers."

"This is most obvious in the case of nations who are separated by oceans and whose mutual relations of defense primarily are dependent on their navy."

Nagano urged the powers to abolish or drastically reduce offensive arms and provide for defensive arms "best suited to their defensive requirements."

Under the Washington and London treaties, Japan is limited to three-fifths of the total naval strength of either the United States or Great Britain.

Text of Davis' Address Released at Washington. WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The United States refused at London today to discuss Japanese demands for equality in naval strength.

The text of the address by Norman Davis, American delegate, to the naval conference was released at the State Department here.

"The Japanese have proposed that this conference establish a limit for naval armaments which no contracting power might exceed. They express the hope that the agreed limit should be set so low as to require substantial reductions by Japan," said Davis.

"We believe it has been sufficiently shown in the course of our discussions that equality of naval armaments not only is not the same as equality of security, but that the two are incompatible and contradictory. Equal armaments do not insure equal security."

Senate Committee Writes New History of Events That Led U. S. Into World War

Communications of Wilson and Lansing Put in Record to Support Theory Commercial Pressure Was Used.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON, A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Chairman Nye of the Senate Munitions Committee today charged that Woodrow Wilson and Secretary of State Lansing both knew, when the United States entered the World War, that the Allies had entered into secret treaties dividing conquered territory among themselves, and that they both "falsified" when they told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee later that they did not learn of the treaties until the Paris peace conference.

Senator Clark (Dem.), Missouri, had been reading from communications in which the State Department was told that Britain and France had been compelled to sign a secret pact promising Constantinople and the Dardanelles to Imperial Russia, as the price of preventing Russia from making a secret peace with the Central Powers.

"I think it would be well to state at this point," Nye said, "that documents now in evidence, together with confidential information in the committee's possession, show clearly that President Wilson and Secretary Lansing were fully apprised of these secret treaties before we entered the war, and that they falsified when they said they did not."

Clark rejoined that he was not familiar with all the evidence, but he read the testimony of Wilson and Lansing before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in 1919, in which both stated they knew nothing of the secret pacts until after the war.

Clark added that Lloyd George had stated in his memoirs that Wilson did not want to be "officially" informed about the treaties.

Nye's accusation occurred as the committee proceeded with its self-assigned task of rewriting the history of events leading up to America's entrance into the war.

Clark sought to show from documents, some hitherto unpublished, that American loans and credits to the Allies caused a gradual abandonment of neutrality by the United States Government, and that this, and not German submarine warfare, brought us into the war.

The Nye-Clark history differed materially from that in the textbooks.

The documents included a number of hitherto unpublished communications by President Wilson, Secretary of State Robert Lansing, Col. E. M. House and Ambassadors Page and Gerard. Where it suited the thread of his narrative, Clark inserted excerpts from various books of memoirs and his own comments.

In the picture as presented by him the United States Government was shown gradually abandoning an attitude of firm neutrality in favor of the Allies, until it reached a point where Ambassador Gerard reported that the German Chancellor and Foreign Minister declared themselves convinced that the United States had "a secret understanding with England" making it impossible to reach any satisfactory arrangement of the rules governing submarine warfare.

Summarizing the evidence this afternoon, Chairman Nye said: "It is perfectly obvious that every time our neutrality conflicted with our commercial interest in the war, neutrality was sacrificed, and that our Government, while pretending to desire neutrality, was actually looking for an excuse to break with Germany."

"And," Clark interjected, "that Colonel House complained over the difficulty of finding an excuse."

Evidence that Morgan & Co. advised the British to curtail purchases in the United States to influence the policy of the Federal Reserve Board in November, 1915, was produced in a cable from Morgan's to its London office. The board had advised banks against buying Treasury bills of the Allied Governments. Morgan's called this the gravest blow to Allied financing since the start of the war, and that, while the firm would make every effort through "educational processes" to "counteract the statement," Morgan's advised that:

"We can see no way except for your authorities to consider ways and means for immediate curtailment of purchases, letting such action be announced without rancor, but explicitly with possible good effect on American attitude."

"If this didn't mean that the British should curtail purchases in order to influence the policy of the Federal Reserve Board, I'd like to know what it meant," Clark remarked. "You can draw your own inference but I assure you that we had no such lucubration in our minds," Thomas W. Lamont, Morgan partner, replied, when the bankers were examined again this afternoon.

"Elaborate," Clark exclaimed. "I never read a plainer or more concise threat."

Morgan Hears Evidence. Throughout the early reading of the documents by Clark, Morgan and his partners sat more or less interested spectators, although Chairman Nye had offered to excuse them. Morgan nodded several times and exhibited signs of weariness. He is tired of the whole business, his associates say, and wants to go home.

The war was hardly a month old on Aug. 6, 1914, when Secretary of State Bryan inquired whether Britain was prepared to abide by the London Declaration. This document establishing the rules of blockade, defining contraband and otherwise setting forth the rights of belligerents and neutrals in sea warfare had been drawn up in 1909 but never ratified by Great Britain.

The British Government replied that it would accept the declaration "with such modifications and additions" as it deemed necessary to the successful operation of the blockade which it had declared against Germany. It was under the head of such "modifications and additions" that Great Britain enunciated the doctrine of "ultimate consumption," under which neutrals were prohibited from shipping certain commodities to certain neutral ports on the ground they were intended ultimately for Germany.

Embargo on Materials. Subsequently the British Government declared an embargo on the shipment of any raw materials from the British Dominions. The embargoed commodities included rubber, hides, wool, jute and others which the United States imported in large quantities. The embargo brought wide protest in this country whereupon the British reluctantly inaugurated the system by which certain manufacturers were licensed to receive British raw materials provided they pledged themselves to ship the completed products only to Great Britain.

Acting on numerous complaints from American business men, Bryan asked Sir Cecil Spring Rice, British Ambassador, whether the British rule also prohibited American importers of British raw materials from selling the materials to manufacturers in the United States and was told it did.

"Thus," commented Senator Clark, "Great Britain asserted a right to regulate our trade, not only with neutrals outside the war zone, but inside our own country."

In December of the same year Ambassador Gerard reported from Berlin that Germans bitterly resented the export of munitions from the United States to Great Britain, regarding it as unequal.

Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, apparently apprehending that this trade would lead to serious complications, introduced a resolution in the Senate prohibiting the export of munitions to any belligerent.

British Interest in Bill. Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Minister, expressed the hope to Sir Cecil that the resolution would not pass. Sir Cecil was reassured on that point by Bryan, who added that, while he and Hitchcock were both from Nebraska, "he is not friendly to me."

"Not content," Clark said, "with imposing restrictions on our own domestic trade, the British Foreign Office now undertook to say what legislation should be passed by the United States Senate."

Continued shipment of American munitions in rapidly increasing volume to the allies brought a protest in April, 1915, from German Ambassador von Bernstorff, who declared the Kaiser's Government could not conceive how the provisioning and arming of its enemies could be considered neutral conduct. He pointed out that, in contrast, the only American ship which had attempted to carry supplies to Germany had been seized by British war vessels, and its cargo confiscated. He complained that the United States Government had done nothing about this, and added:

"The Imperial Embassy must therefore assume that the United States Government acquiesces in this violation of international law."

Bryan denied that the incident had constituted a breach of international law, and asserted, moreover, that American trade in war materials was wholly in accord with international law.

"In other words," Clark explained, "our Government simply held that we had no power to change the terms of international law after war broke out."

However, the "gentle rain of war orders did not fall alike on all American business men, and there were numerous and bitter complaints that British restrictions on our foreign trade were threatening many American businesses."

disaster, and in October, 1915, we protested to the British Government. The State Department declared we "could not submit to illegal curtailment of our rights."

Quotes From Lansing. "In your opinion," Nye asked Clark, "were these protests intended to be taken seriously?" Clark replied that the best answer was to be found in Lansing's Memoirs. He read a passage in which the former Secretary of State admitted he did not press his protests to the British, hoping that American resentment

MOVIE SHOW ON WHEELS 'TO DEFEND CONSTITUTION'

Tour Starts From Philadelphia Under Auspices of Sentinels of Republic.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 15.—Automobiles carrying an exhibit and equipment to show motion pictures "in defense of the Constitution," under auspices of the Sentinels of the Republic started southward yesterday after a ceremony at Independence Hall.

Henry Breckinridge, Assistant Secretary of War under President Wilson, and Mayor S. Davis Wilson, dedicated the equipment.

"Little political men have tried to lay hands on your liberty," Breckinridge said. "Taking advantage of economic confusion, they have made quite a start in persuading servile Congressmen to pass legislation and judicial powers into the hands of the bureaucrats."

Growth of the country under the Constitution framed in Philadelphia was outlined by Mayor Wilson.

"The time to take sides has come," he said. "It is time for true Americans respecting the principles of Government under which they have thrived to stand up in support of their Constitution."

GOVERNMENT AGREES TO TEST OF 1933 SECURITIES ACT

Promoter Raises Question As to Right to Require Registration of New Stocks.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The Government accepted yesterday a challenge to test the constitutionality of the 1933 Securities Act in the Supreme Court. In a memorandum, Solicitor-General Stanley Reed agreed that a case brought by J. Edward Jones, oil stock promoter, raised the question whether the Government has the right to require registration of new securities.

The case grew out of Jones' refusal to answer a subpoena issued by the Securities Commission in connection with registration for an issue of oil royalties which the commission alleged contained "untrue statements."

Reed said the issue was of "obvious public importance," but he sought to limit the test "to the question of the power of Congress to enact the registration provisions of the act. Jones has attacked it on other points, including that of excessive delegation of legislative authority."

DEFENDS PREFERENTIAL PRICE AT ANTI-TRUST HEARING

Attorney for Goodyear Co. Says Sears, Roebuck Is Its Largest Customer.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Price differentials to Sears, Roebuck & Co. were defended before the Federal Trade Commission today by counsel for the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. on the ground that the quantity business obtained justified them.

The commission is hearing final arguments on its citation of the Goodyear Co. for alleged violation of the Clayton Anti-trust Act through price discrimination in its contract to make tires for Sears, Roebuck. A provision of the act permits discrimination on account of quantity among other reasons.

"No one has ever denied the motive of this contract was to secure an enormous volume of new business," Grover Higgins, Goodyear attorney, told the commission.

Higgins said the dollar volume of purchases of tires by Sears, Roebuck ranged from 13 to 36 times as great as Goodyear's next largest customer.

COURT BARS LABOR BOARD'S 'INTERFERENCE' WITH FIRMS

Temporary Injunction Issued at Boston on Behalf of Accused Concerns.

BOSTON, Jan. 15.—The National Labor Relations Board was temporarily restrained today from "interfering with the management" of two Massachusetts corporations which had been cited before the board for alleged violation of the Wagner-Connery Labor law. Federal Judge Elish H. Brewster signed the order.

The constitutionality of the labor law was attacked by the two firms, the Lion Shoe Co. of Lynn and the A. C. Lawrence Leather Co., a Maine corporation having a plant in Peabody, Mass.

The question of issuing a permanent injunction will come before Judge Brewster next Monday.

The firms, in their petitions, contended that "interference" with their business, under the law, constituted an infringement of their private property rights.

PUERTO RICANS DEMAND EXPLANATION BY ICKES

Want Him to Confirm or Deny Report of Sugar Control of Legislature.

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico, Jan. 15.—Two leaders of the Puerto Rican Senate announced yesterday they had cabled Secretary of the Interior Ickes a request either to confirm or deny newspaper stories quoting him as expressing the opinion the Puerto Rican Legislature was controlled by sugar interests.

The message was sent by Martinez Nadal, President of the Senate, and Vice-President Bolivar Pagan.

Ickes, on a tour of the islands, was quoted recently as saying huge sugar plantations were contrary to law and should be broken up into small farms.

RUSSIA INCREASES STANDING ARMY TO 1,300,000 MEN

Step Announced Following Doubling of Military Appropriations Due to Japan and Germany.

By the Associated Press. MOSCOW, Jan. 15.—The Soviet army has been increased to 1,300,000 men, Assistant Commissar of War Mikhail Tukhachevsky announced today in an address before the Central Executive Committee of the Communist party.

After charges last week by Premier Molotov that the Soviet Union was threatened with war on the east by Japan and on the west by Germany, the Government announced last night its military budget for 1936 would be more than double that of last year. During 1935 the standing army was increased to about 1,000,000 men.

800,000,000 rubles, (which is $2,960,000,000 under the new exchange rate fixed by Russia,) on armed forces, Gregory Grinko, Commissar of Finance, told the All-Union Central Executive Committee. The committee unanimously approved the proposal.

Last year's war budget was 6,500,000,000 rubles, but the expenditures actually reached more than 8,500,000,000 rubles.

The military budget is about 19 per cent of the total budget announced for 1936, which is 78,500,000,000 rubles, ($15,700,000,000 at the official rate.) Last year's total was 65,500,000,000 rubles, of which only 10 per cent was devoted to military uses.

Construction Work. Grinko also announced that 28,700,000,000 rubles would be used this year for construction work, a large part of which will go to the reconstruction of Moscow and Leningrad.

Rumors of a coming currency devaluation were officially denied by Grinko, who said there would be no new currency issue.

The Vice-Commissar of Heavy Industry, Mikhail Kaganovich, who also is head of the National Air Industry, said in a speech that the principal efforts of aviation would be devoted to the development of powerful bombers capable of carrying out raids on enemy territory and returning to the homeland.

These bombers, it was indicated, must have a considerably better performance than most of those in the present air force, which are equipped with four-motored machines, have a top speed of 140 miles an hour, and a cruising radius of 1250 miles.

Army to Be Strengthened. Grinko said the additional expenditures this year for the army would be used to increase the number of men, improve and add to technical equipment and improve living quarters. He did not indicate to what man-strength the army would be raised.

have said that the danger of war is increasing. "The situation in the Far East has come into prominence because of repeated border clashes and alleged Japanese threats, to occupy outer Mongolia, a republic with closely allied interests with the Soviet Union."

The most recent incident occurred a few days ago when a Japanese military plane, according to Soviet dispatches, landed in Soviet territory and its two occupants were wounded and captured after attacking a Soviet citizen and border guards. It was reported that Japan has demanded release of the two airmen, who now are in a hospital on the Soviet side of the border. Soviet officials replied they would release them as soon as the incident has been thoroughly investigated.

Reported Recommendations. The report, drawn up after nearly a year of intensive study of every aspect of the Hauptmann case, was said to have included the following recommendations:

Limitation of crowds to the capacity of the courtroom with Sheriff's attaches barred from using legal processes to get politically connected curiosity seekers into the trial.

Taking of pictures in the courtroom should be held in contempt of court.

No telegraph wires into the courthouse building.

No radio broadcasts, no movies of the trial, no vaudeville appearances of jurors or principals after the proceedings.

BAR'S MOVE FOR CODE OF CONDUCT AT TRIALS

Special Committee to Be Named to Aid in Deciding Standards.

By the Associated Press. CHICAGO, Jan. 15.—The American Bar Association has taken steps toward the establishment of a code of conduct for lawyers, press and public at criminal trials.

The organization's Executive Committee spent two days considering a long criticism of the "atmosphere" surrounding Bruno Richard Hauptmann's trial and then announced it had voted to: "Create a special committee authorized to invite the co-operation of other organizations for the purpose of formulating standards which will be designed to avoid prejudicial publicity and conduct in connection with judicial and quasi-judicial proceedings."

President William L. Ransom, who had urged action to prevent recurrence of the "shocking incidents" at Hauptmann's trial for the murder of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's baby, will appoint a special committee. The other organizations whose aid will be sought were not specified.

The Executive Committee also voted to give to the "special committee without publication the report of the criminal law section as to certain phases of publicity and conduct in connection with criminal trials."

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles: that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight for the rights of the people, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare; never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Supreme Court as a Peace Influence.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
THE value of the Supreme Court in American history is proved by the fact that it has prevented many a bloody civil war in our country.

The nations in Europe have engaged in many wars because they have no supreme court to decide matters of controversy among themselves.

If, at the beginning of our history under the Constitution, it had been definitely and finally settled that this is a nation and not a mere league of states, the Civil War would not have happened. After the revolution, in 1789, and before the adoption of the Constitution, Pennsylvania and New Hampshire had a controversy over the ownership of the Green Mountain region, which threatened to break out in civil warfare, because both states had troops at the border ready to fight. The issue was settled after much heated argument, and was finally adjusted after the formation of the Constitution by placing the Green Mountain region into the State of Vermont.

Before the time of our present Constitution, others of the 13 states were ready to go to war with one another over commercial and boundary regulations, which were only adjusted with great difficulty. Such disputes, which threatened the peace of the Union, have also occurred many times under the Constitution, but, fortunately for us, the Supreme Court as our highest arbiter, has always rendered the final decisions that have kept the peace between the States and conflicting interests. Lord Bryce, in the American Commonwealth, has well said: "Would we had a Supreme Court for the European states and nations." We are naturally impatient of restraint, but, where there is no restraint there is anarchy.

How grateful we should therefore be to the framers of the Constitution who provided us with Federal judiciary that has preserved "this indestructible union of indestructible states." Wherefore, Lord Gladstone very aptly said that "the Constitution of the United States is the most wonderful instrument ever struck off at a given time by the brain and purpose of man."

HENRY A. KERSTING.

Anschromen.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
I NOTED your editorial about the very wonderful production of Charles Dickens' "Tale of Two Cities," as reproduced in the pictures.

You comment upon the truthfulness of the pictured portrayal of this story and mention the herds of employees who worked upon the historical background. It is interesting to note, however, that in the scene portraying the taking of the Bastille, the Marquis de Lafayette, the French national anthem, "Marseillaise," is heard. This song was not written until 1792, some three years after the fall of the Bastille, when it became an inspiration to French revolutionaries in repelling the attacks of the allies, who were then undertaking the restoration of the Bourbon Kings in France.

Yours for historical accuracy,
J. C. HOESTER JR.

Unkempt Streets.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
WHILE walking down Delmar boulevard recently I could not help but notice the unkempt appearance of the sidewalks and the front yards of the residences were littered with old newspapers, handbills, cartons and wrappings. This condition existed all the way from Union to Grand. No doubt dozens of other streets present the same sorry sight.

One does not see this sort of thing in European cities. In Vienna, the throwing of even a street car transfer into the gutter is frowned upon by the police. The citizens are taught early in life that clean streets are a form of health insurance, reduce taxation and keep up property values. They have an inborn guilty conscience about littering their streets. Why can't the rest of St. Louis look as neat as Forest Park? Why not have waste receptacles on every corner? They will pay for themselves a hundredfold.

NORMAN TOBIAS, M. D.

A Tribute to C. Arthur Anderson.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
THE people of St. Louis County have been well repaid for having elected C. Arthur Anderson as Prosecuting Attorney.

His achievements since taking the office stand out prominently. Dog track and slot machine operators, gamblers of all description, kidnappers, etc., have finally had their field eliminated. And now Mr. Anderson has under way the St. Louis County Hospital investigation and thus far has proved that institution "has been used" for purposes other than intended.

Your paper is also doing a worthy amount of real public good by the almost daily detail which you publish regarding the County Hospital and the County Court.

Mr. Anderson's work has brought out the information that a so-called "taxpayers' protective outfit" operates in reverse. Keep the light right on them, Mr. Anderson.

COUNTYMAN.

THE COURT AND THE PRESIDENT.

It has been said that by the appointment of two new Justices of the United States Supreme Court, to fill vacancies created by death, resignation or retirement, President Roosevelt could give the court an entirely different complexion.

True it is that two changes might produce a decision in conformity with the views of the minority of three in the AAA case, but how about several other decisions of the court invalidating acts of Congress under the present administration? The vote against the NRA was 9 to 0; against the original Farm Mortgage Act (not strictly a New Deal measure, but signed by the President), 9 to 0; against Federal regulation of "hot oil" shipments, 8 to 1; against the conversion of building and loan associations into federally-chartered bodies in contravention of state laws, 9 to 0. In addition, there was the unanimous vote of the court against Mr. Roosevelt's dismissal of Trade Commissioner Humphrey for the sole reason that the latter's mind did not go along with the President's. It would have required wholesale changes in the court's personnel to produce different decisions in these cases.

But let the speculation be confined to the effects of two changes. Could Mr. Roosevelt be assured in advance that his two new Judges would join the dissenting members in the AAA case? It must be taken for granted, of course, that neither he nor any other President would enter into a bargain with a prospective appointee. Then the argument must be, on the part of those who foresee a "liberalization" of the court if the President has the opportunity, that in making his appointments he would give controlling weight to the political and economic philosophy, or what he conceived to be the political and economic philosophy, of the men under review. Even so, could he be assured of getting from his appointees the kind of opinions, on points of constitutional interpretation, that he would like to have?

The recent history of the Supreme Court suggests that a large element of uncertainty would remain. So it must be, inevitably, when able, sincere and outstanding men—and we must assume the appointment of such men by all our Presidents—are set apart from political life, placed in an ivory tower, so to speak, given complete economic security and charged with the duty of settling constitutional questions on the sole basis of what they believe the Constitution to mean.

We have only to go back to the NRA decision to see how hazardous is prophecy regarding the opinion of any Justice in a given case. There was a widespread popular assumption, based on a misunderstanding of the court's true function, that the fate of the NRA would be settled by a closely divided vote. The result was precisely the contrary. Similarly, a great amount of prophecy was confounded by the coming together of the so-called "liberal" wing of the court and the so-called "conservative" wing in the other cases we have cited.

To go farther back, it is well known that when Theodore Roosevelt appointed the late Oliver Wendell Holmes to the Supreme bench, he cherished the confident expectation that Holmes would decide a particular way in the Northern Securities case. To the great chagrin of the President, Holmes went the other way, with the incidental result that the cordial personal relations that had existed between the two were broken. Woodrow Wilson chose for the court Justices McReynolds and Brandeis. If he hoped they would see the Constitution in any special light, he must have been grievously disappointed as to one of them, for the two men have been at opposite poles of thought in numerous important decisions. It is instructive also to note, without raising any question as to presidential motive in either instance, that the conservative Coolidge appointed Justice Stone, spokesman of the minority in the AAA case, and the conservative Hoover appointed Justice Cardozo.

The point is simply that while two changes in the court's personnel might convert the 6-to-3 lineup against the AAA philosophy into a 5-to-4 division the other way, it is far from certain that this would be the result.

The suggestion has been made that Congress deliberately seek to "pack" the court in favor of administration measures by increasing the number of Justices. This would mean taking the AAA decision as a criterion, that four Justices would have to be added. The right of Congress to regulate the size of the court is unquestioned, but the proposal that this power be used to procure a majority for an administration program is utterly vicious. We cannot imagine that either the leaders of Congress or the President will countenance it for a minute.

TEMPERATE MR. WINANT.

Those who read the outline of what the Social Security Board hopes to accomplish this year, as set forth by its chairman, John G. Winant of New Hampshire, for the Associated Press, read a commendably lucid and moderate exposition. For Mr. Winant did not hail the Social Security Act as a cure-all for our social ills. Indeed, he explicitly stated that its administrators do not expect it to end economic depressions. The most which they expect of it is that it will operate as an economic bumper for the country in periods of prolonged unemployment. This temperateness, which comes as no surprise to persons who have followed Mr. Winant's services as Governor of New Hampshire and in other important posts, is particularly desirable in this instance. A grandiose prediction of what the Social Security Act is to accomplish would raise hopes that could never be realized. The course of moderation is both wiser and kinder.

CRISIS IN PINCKNEYVILLE.

A major controversy is being waged under very noses and going virtually unnoticed. We have in mind, of course, the battle in Pinckneyville, Ill., provoked by a movement to junk the fire bell and set up a siren in its place. City officials, supported by the younger element of the town, bent on the so-called modernization, are even willing to hold a benefit show to raise the purchase price of the siren. Fortunately, the municipal budget makes no provision for such an expenditure at this writing and those wiser folk who would keep the trusted fire bell on the job are having a chance to organize their forces.

For our sympathies, we may as well make plain, are on the side of the fire bell. In recent years, with residents of other communities long since denied the ringing of the fire bell in the middle of the night, the people of Pinckneyville have continued to enjoy that old-time experience. Not all of us could go to Pinckneyville again to live through the clarion alarm and the subsequent dash, partially-clarion, to the fire, but it has been good to know that Pinckneyville has stayed by the bell. The choice is between undistinguishing imitation and the preservation of an honorable institution. Can it be that the good people of Pinckneyville will fall the rest of us in this hour of crisis?

THE ARENA AS AN ARMORY?

Once again, the proposal is made that the City of St. Louis acquire the Arena, this time for use as an armory. An aldermanic committee has been appointed to make an inquiry and to submit a report. The purchase, if made, would be financed by an item in the 1934 public works bond issue, setting aside $1,000,000 for "acquisition by construction or purchase of a new National Guard armory."

The persistence with which the owners of the Arena have tried to sell it to the city arises from the fact that, as a private money-making enterprise, it has been a failure. There is no reason to suppose that its financial status would improve under city management. Thus, there has grown up a natural resentment at the idea of reimbursing the Arena's promoters out of the city treasury and of placing a white elephant on the taxpayers' shoulders.

On the other hand, since in any case the city is to have an armory and no armory is a self-supporting institution, the idea of using the Arena for the purpose deserves serious consideration. If the Arena can be purchased at a bargain price (it is said $750,000 was asked for building and grounds during the second Miller administration), it might be better to acquire it than to build a new armory.

In view of somewhat suspicious circumstances in past negotiations, however, the motto of the city in the current proposal should be, "Stop, look and listen."

TO THE ALTON TELEGRAPH, CONGRATULATIONS!

Our felicitations cross the river today to the Alton Evening Telegraph, which is celebrating a century of existence with the publication of a 100-page edition—a page for every year. A life of 100 years is not exceptional in the newspaper world of the East, but it is a rarity out here where the wilderness kept the founding of social institutions for a later day. St. Louis, which was founded before Alton, has no journal which goes back as far.

Much of the commemorative edition is given over to the history of Alton and the surrounding area. This is as it should be. Clilo, muse of history, has written down the name of Alton on more than one important occasion. Lincoln and Douglas met there for the seventh time in their historic verbal battle of 1858. It was the fall of the year, and the redness of the leaves might have been in memory of Elijah P. Lovejoy, who had given his life on the streets of Alton 25 years before in the cause which the tall, gaunt country lawyer appealed to the highest court of all, the people.

The city which knew such stirring scenes and its venerable newspaper have our best wishes for the years to come.

HOWARD HUGHES' FLIGHT.

Howard Hughes, a movie producer, stole a march on professional aviators and captured the west-to-east trans-continental speed record. He flew from Burbank, Cal., to New York in less than nine hours and a half, with an average speed of close to 260 miles an hour for the entire distance. For one long stretch, he flew at 295 miles an hour. Most of the distance, Hughes maintained an altitude of 18,000 feet.

If the details of this exploit fail to arouse the imagination, it is because that human faculty has been assailed by the brilliant feats of aviation in the last decade to the point where it no longer reacts normally. The revolution in transportation from the comparatively recent covered wagon era is stunningly complete. Man's ingenuity and courage recognize no obstacles. Here's to Howard Hughes!

MUSSOLINI'S MULES.

The Missouri mule is one of the hardest beasts known to man. His race has a record of grit, determination, stamina and ruggedness that is unsurpassed in the animal kingdom's annals. So when it is reported that this indomitable creature is willing in the forbidding climate of Ethiopia, that's news. Twenty per cent of the Italian army's American mules (many of them from Missouri) have given up the ghost, says the report. The survivors, it is said, have become acclimated and will "live forever." That isn't news; it's characteristic.

Does the Italian censor who passed this dispatch realize its significance? A climate that takes such a death rate among these practically indestructible creatures must be a veritable Black Hole of Calcutta for Mussolini's human cannon fodder. Missourians who know intimately the mule's indomitable qualities will realize the import of the situation and understand fully what Mussolini is up against. Trying to conquer a region where a Missouri mule can't live is the height of butting the head against a stone wall.

MR. WINTER ANNOUNCES.

Edward H. Winter of Jefferson City, who was defeated by Gov. Park in the Democratic landslide of 1932, is the first Republican to announce his candidacy for Governor. Mr. Winter is a man of wide experience in State affairs. He published newspapers at Warren and Jefferson City; he served three terms in the lower house of the Missouri Legislature and was Speaker in 1927; he became Lieutenant Governor in 1928. As in 1932, Mr. Winter will base his campaign on opposition to the boss rule of Tom Pendergast.

The importance of the Republican nomination appears to have been measurably increased by the decision of William Hirth, Missouri farm leader, to enter the Democratic primary contest and make an issue of Pendergast bossism. It will not be surprising, therefore, if other Republicans besides Mr. Winter, encouraged by the hope of an anti-boss exodus from the Democratic ranks if Mr. Hirth is defeated in the primary election, decide to toss their hats into the ring.

Aside from all this, of course, there is the fact that the Republicans are in no such forlorn case as they were in 1932. Then they were called upon to defend the unpopular Hoover administration; now they are in a position of aggressive attack, with all the recent straws including the Literary Digest poll, indicating a fair chance of a Republican victory in the State this fall.

Will Jupiter Pluvius be Mussolini's Wellington?

HOW TO UNSCRAMBLE EGGS?

TODAY AND TOMORROW

By Walter Lippmann

After the AAA

THERE is a very good reason why there has been no wailing and gnashing of teeth at the judicial destruction of the AAA. It is that the court has cleared the ground for a far better agricultural program. Without some such general sweeping away of the emergency devices of the AAA and the powerful vested interests and sectional lobbies which it was establishing, it would have taken years of educational effort, probably years of disappointing effort, to induce Congress to consider seriously a truly national program. The far-sighted agricultural leaders have known for many months that they were in a sense the prisoners of the AAA's success. The thing worked so well to satisfy immediately the more politically powerful farmers that very little progress could be made in substituting a better policy.

Yet AAA, though a justifiable expedient, was bound in the long run to become an economic and political monstrosity. The theory that the price of a few commodities selected out of all the products of the farms must be maintained at a level fixed by Congress meant that sooner or later Congress would succumb to the temptation to raise this price on some or all of them in order to pay sectional politics. The initial basis of AAA, which was to freeze the right to produce certain commodities on particular farms and then to create a vested right among established farmers as against new farmers, was thoroughly objectionable. The delivery of Government checks for not producing certain commodities was universally disliked.

Yet, without some such decisive ending to this emergency system, it would almost certainly have perpetuated itself, would have degenerated into a scandal as great as that of the tariff lobbies, and would have discredited the whole conception of a national policy for agriculture.

In considering the new policy to be offered to Congress, it should be said that there is plenty of official material available to show that Secretary Wallace has not pulled another white rabbit out of his hat. It is probably true that he has been forced to mature his plans more rapidly than he expected. But the principles of the new policy have been developing for much more than a year, and there are plenty of documents already published which expound them.

What are these principles? The old AAA paid the farmer not to produce so much wheat, cotton, corn and so forth. The new policy proposes to pay him to produce more hay and more crops that preserve and renew the fertility of the land. That is the essence of the change. Instead of a payment not to produce an unwanted surplus of a few commodities, he is to be paid to produce more of these commodities that are needed in the interest of more scientific farming. He will still receive money. But the money will be spent to stimulate him to conserve and replenish the land.

The fundamental point which needs to be understood is that the excessive production of wheat, cotton, corn was not only ruinous to the farmer's pocketbook, but ruinous to the land. There are many millions of acres of farm land in America that have been plowed up and planted to corn and cotton and wheat which ought never to have been plowed up. They should have been left to grass. There are many acres which ought never to be used for those crops because the land is so poor that they exhaust it. These acres ought to be planted to crops that replenish instead of exhaust the soil. There are many acres of land that are not suited to farming at all and should be turned back to forest.

A scientific farm policy, in other words, regardless of all questions of the price of wheat, corn and cotton, more hay, more legumes, more forests. The problem of agricultural adjustment, therefore, is to induce the farmer to farm more scientifically. If he farms more scientifically he will not only conserve the land, but will do away with the surpluses that have been his nightmare.

There are some interesting figures, prepared by the Department of Agriculture long before the court spoke, which illustrate what a scientific use of the land might mean in the way of a shift from the soil-exhausting to the soil-conserving crops. They were arrived at by asking the specialists in the 48 experiment stations all over the country to estimate how many acres in their regions should in the long run be devoted to different kinds of farming.

In 1929-30, there were 360,000 acres of harvested crop land. These experts recommend for the future 355,000 acres. In other words, they wish to retire a little land, but substantially they expect to continue to have as many acres in use as there are now. But when you look at the particular crops, the outlines of the new policy become visible.

Thus they would reduce corn acreage from 98,000,000 acres to 86,000,000; wheat from 62,000,000 to 52,000,000; cotton from 45,000,000 to 38,000,000. On the other hand, they would increase the acreage devoted to hay from 68,000,000 to 81,000,000, the acreage devoted to sorghum and soy beans from 7,000,000 to about 13,000,000. They would reduce hog production by somewhat less than 10 per cent, would increase all cattle by somewhat less than 10 per cent, and they would increase the production of milk by about 20 per cent. Less wheat, cotton, corn and hogs mean less soil-exhausting crops; more hay, legumes, cattle and milk mean soil-conserving and soil-renewing crops. Instead of crops that cannot be sold profitably, that are bad for the land when produced excessively, there would be crops that can be sold, that are needed, that conserve the land.

Mr. Tremayne's Accent

From the Ottawa (Can.) Citizen.

WE have just read in a United States newspaper—the St. Louis Post-Dispatch—not to make it a secret—that one Lester Tremayne, described as a radio dramatist, has taken out $100,000 against the loss of his English accent. This, surely, is an intriguing item.

In the first place, we had an idea that once you got a real English accent you could no more lose it than you could lose the nose on your face. The English accent, in other words, always seemed indestructible. Why, we know chaps right here in Ottawa who, when we first met them and heard their pristine inflections and modulations, and then asked them how long they had been over here, floured us by answering, "My word, I expect it was 1881 or 1884, don't you know?"

However, some fellows' English speech may lose all its subtle beauty by contact with the broad, flat accents of the home-type of native speech. After a few years of resistance, they might find themselves calling a "chawnee" a "chance," and their mortification would be awful to contemplate. And a United States professor recently likened the Middle West speech of his own land to "random noises made by a vacuum cleaner." When you really get a dyed-in-the-wool native talking, his accents are something too fearsome to behold.

So there may be something in this Tremayne person's anxiety after all. If the obviously elegantly-toned Mr. Tremayne found himself making a noise like a vacuum cleaner, then $100,000 would be trivial compensation for his loss. Anyhow, we would like to hear him talk before we judge, for there are some English accents that are heard on the air for the destruction of which the company can't send its check too soon.

OGRE AND CHILD.

From the Chicago Daily News.

MOST our children imitate the beetle, the grasshopper and other insects that have through evolution, adopted protective coloration to escape their enemies. That rather grim suggestion is actually made in a bulletin of the Bureau of Home Economics of the Department of Agriculture: "Dress children in bright-colored outer garments in the winter time," advises the bureau. "While children should not play in city thoroughfares or even on country highways, because of automobiles, there are occasions when they have to cross streets or when they try to retrieve balls or other playthings from the path of traffic."

There is sound sense in the suggestion, but also a most unpleasant intimation that the unrestrained Machine Age is developing into an ogre, preying upon childhood.

serving the land upon which the whole future depends.

If the farmers are ruined and driven off the farms, if the soil is exhausted, is wasted away, is blown away as dust, is it not evident that the very foundations of American independence are imperiled? Why are we relatively the most secure of all great nations? Because of the two oceans for one thing. But also because we can feed and clothe ourselves, because we do not have to depend upon a foreign food supply, because in the essentials of existence we are self-sufficient. That is why it may be said that agriculture be ruined and independence, as Americans have known it, will be gone.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The appointment of Rear Admiral Arthur J. Heppburn as the commander of United States Fleet, eliminates an ancient and at times virulent feud between him and Rear Admiral Joseph Reeves, who retired as commander of the fleet.

It began where they were both young officers. It continued when they went as naval experts to the Neva Conference of 1927, where Reeves worked against an agreement and Heppburn for it.

The feud reached a climax during the Pacific maneuvers last summer—the greatest peacetime maneuvers ever held.

Heppburn commanded the scouting fleet in Alaskan waters which attacked the defending fleet around Hawaiian waters. The defending fleet, commanded by Reeves, Heppburn maneuvered all around Reeves, scored important hits, theoretically "sank" several of his vessels. The referees decided that Heppburn, representing the enemy, won the day, could have invaded the shores of California.

It was largely on the basis of this feat that Heppburn secured his present promotion to take Reeves' place. Casualty Reeves.

ONE incident occurred during the Pacific maneuvers that so far has been a strict secret. That was the death of Admiral Reeves was killed.

His flagship, the Pennsylvania, dashed with Admiral Heppburn's flagship, the Maryland. And the captain of the Pennsylvania (who, some naval officers suspect, defied not Admiral Reeves) marked down hit for the Maryland on the Pennsylvania's control room.

Theoretically, the control room has been blown up. Admiral Reeves was in the control room. Theoretically, he was killed. The Admiral was indignant about this. He did not like the idea of being killed, especially on his own flagship. However, the captain of the ship said he had been killed, and there was nothing much Reeves could do about it.

But when the umpires checked the reports of the two battleships, they found that the Maryland had fired no shots. Therefore, the control room was intact. It was also the startling beard of Admiral Reeves.

NOTE—Heppburn is considered one of the most brilliant strategists in the Navy. Relatively young, he shows a revolutionary clean-up of Navy personnel, is not popular with the older sea-dogs.

THE DAILY WASHINGTON

MERRY GO ROUND

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15. APPOINTMENT of Rear Admiral Arthur J. Hepburn as the commander of United States Fleet culminates an ancient and at times virulent feud between him and Rear Admiral Joseph Reeves, who retired as commander of the fleet.

It began when they were both young officers. It continued when they went as naval experts to the Geneva Conference of 1927, where Reeves worked against an agreement and Hepburn for it.

The feud reached a climax during the Pacific maneuvers last summer—the greatest peacetime maneuvers ever held.

Hepburn commanded the scouting fleet in Alaskan waters which attacked the defending fleet around the Hawaiian waters. The defending fleet was commanded by Reeves.

Hepburn maneuvered all around Reeves, scored important hits, theoretically "sank" several of his vessels. The referees decided that Hepburn had won the day, could have invaded the shores of California.

It was largely on the basis of this feat that Hepburn secured his present promotion to take Reeves' place. Casualty Reeves.

ONE incident occurred during the Pacific maneuvers that so far has been a strict secret. Theoretically Admiral Reeves was "killed."

His flagship, the Pennsylvania, clashed with Admiral Hepburn's flagship, the Maryland. And the captain of the Pennsylvania (who, some naval officers suspect, did not let the Maryland on the Pennsylvania's control room.

Theoretically, the control room was blown up. Admiral Reeves was the control room. Theoretically, he was killed.

The Admiral was indignant about this. He did not like the idea of being killed, especially on his own flagship. However, the captain of the ship said he had been killed, and there was nothing much Reeves could do about it.

But when the umpires checked the reports of the two battleships, they found that the Maryland had fired no shots. Therefore, the control room was intact.

NOTE—Hepburn is considered one of the most brilliant strategists in the Navy. Relatively young, he shows a revolutionary clean-up of Navy personnel, is not popular with the older sea-dogs.

Justice Roberts. ONE unnoticed highlight of the White House reception to the judiciary was Justice Owen Joseph Roberts, immaculate, tall, straight as a ramrod, talking to Joseph E. Keenan, No. 3 man in the Justice Department.

Said Justice Roberts: "I thought the arguments of the government were excellent, especially those of the Solicitor-General. The control room was intact, and there was nothing much Reeves could do about it."

Just three days before, he had handed down the famous AAA opinion knocking those arguments into the cocked hat (Stone, Brandeis, Cardozo dissenting).

RFN Next? N view of the Supreme Court's banning of the entire AAA, much official confusion has arisen regarding the fate of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. The giant Government lending agency—whose billions of public funds saved hundreds of banks, railroads, insurance companies and industries from collapse—is indirectly involved in an unnoted case pending on the court's calendar.

The immediate parties to the suit are the Baltimore Trust Co. and the Maryland Tax Commission. The point at issue is whether the RFC must pay State taxes on bank stock it has purchased.

The Maryland Tax Commission holds that the RFC is subject to the State tax just as any other stockholder is. But the bank answers that a state cannot tax Federal holdings. As "a friend of the court," the RFC has filed a brief supporting the bank's position.

Lawyers think it highly unlikely that the Supreme Court will use the case to pass on the legality of the RFC. But if it follows its policy in the AAA case of being beyond the immediate question and ruling on the constitutionality of the whole law, then it may very well call the turn on the RFC.

Commentator. AMONG the hundreds of personal messages received by the President congratulating him on his message to Congress was one from Gen. Hugh S. Johnson.

As one of the New Deal's most caustic critics recently, Johnson's telegram was particularly appreciated by the President. He singled it out for special mention to close friends.

But in his daily newspaper column several days later, Johnson characterized the address as a "rabbie rouser," staged in an atmosphere resembling "the French Revolutionary convention before the tribune of terror."

Merry-Go-Round. CONGRESSMEN are being played by an advocate of a new "prosperity" scheme. Mushroom growth from Townsend soil, it requires the Government to give a $20,000,000 endowment policy to every child at birth.

Mr. Harry Hopkins is trying to break her husband of a bad habit. He takes his glasses off, sticks one end in the corner of his mouth, and lets them dangle there while he talks.

Stanch friend of Republican John G. Winant of the Social Security Board is Democratic Fred Brown, Senator from New Hampshire. Brown admires Winant in spite of a trouncing he once got at Winant's hands in the race for Governor of New Hampshire.

A trick of speech has been learned by Jim Wadsworth, New York Congressman. When he follows another member who has shouted himself hoarse trying to make an unruly House pay attention, Wadsworth gets up and speaks in a quiet tone.

The contrast makes members quiet down to hear him. Blind Congressman Matt Dunn of Pennsylvania likes to travel by plane. If he pays out a $5 bill, he knows it's not a $1 bill. He keeps them in separate places in his bill-fold.

The women members of Congress are seldom seen together. (Copyright, 1936.)

General Johnson's Article

Invalidation of New Deal Laws Has Made Roosevelt's "Fairly Rounded Whole" More Like "What Is Surrounded by a Doughnut."

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON.

NEW YORK, Jan. 15. WE HAD to build, you in the Congress and I as executive. Now, after 24 months of work, we contemplate a fairly rounded whole. But you spell it that way? Isn't the result now more like what is surrounded by a doughnut?

No President ever tried harder to make the law-making power to raise the condition of a whole people to an endurable whole. No President was ever more completely frustrated.

Ninety per cent of the proposed New Deal consisted in three great principles: (1) Conservative fiscal policy as its center; (2) farm relief (AAA) as its right wing; (3) unemployment relief (NIRA) as its left wing.

The fiscal policy was side-tracked by the administration itself. The two wings were crumpled up by the Supreme Court. The courage of the President is like that of a fox at the first alarm. "My left is destroyed. My right is crumpled. I am attacking with my center." But look at the center. The budget is no budget at all. It doesn't include relief legislation, which hitherto have asked for as much as all the remaining cost of government. It does include revenue already invalidated. It omits to consider the bonus. Like Hoover budget, it is based on a prophecy of 20 per cent increase in revenue, which would require more than a 20 per cent increase in business.

It is no budget at all. Yet "we approach a balance of the national budget." It is like a legendary warrior—unhinged and hacked red, pointing a desperate remnant to victory with the broken haft of a glorious sword.

Say what you will about the policies, associates, mistakes and shortcomings of Franklin Roosevelt, he deserves the palm for a number of merits—courage, loyalty, determination, leadership and (what Americans love most) unrelenting fight, scorning compromise, against threatening odds. FEUERMANN, LEVITZKI GIVE JOINT RECITAL

Celloist and Pianist Appear at Auditorium Before Audience of 3000.

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN.

THE Civic Music League presented Emanuel Feuermann, violoncellist, and Mischa Levitzki, pianist, in a joint recital at the Municipal Auditorium last night. It was the second concert in the current series of attractions sponsored by this organization and drew the usual large audience of about 3000.

Mr. Levitzki's talents are familiar to St. Louis, but it was Mr. Feuermann's first appearance here. As usual in the case of an artist who has made a European reputation, his presence was preceded by a wave of favorable publicity, both by word of mouth and in the public prints.

What is not so usual is that his performance last night was a justification of everything that had been said in his behalf. Certainly he was not more than three or four living persons who have made by word of mouth and in the public prints. What is not so usual is that his performance last night was a justification of everything that had been said in his behalf.

Charles O. Schwalbe, 63 years old, in charge of the cloak room at the Masonic Temple, 3681 Lindell boulevard, collapsed there last night and was dead when a physician was summoned. He had been in ill health for several months. He lived at 3120 Hampton avenue.

Dies in Masonic Temple. Charles O. Schwalbe, 63 years old, in charge of the cloak room at the Masonic Temple, 3681 Lindell boulevard, collapsed there last night and was dead when a physician was summoned. He had been in ill health for several months. He lived at 3120 Hampton avenue.

Unfortunately the program to which the artists were committed was not such as to give a complete view of their talents. It began with Beethoven's Sonata in A Major for piano and cello—which was given in a rich and poetic performance. The virtues of understatement and suggestion were uppermost in the treatment accorded the music by both artists. Nor did the sureness of their repose and the effectiveness of their balance prevent the music from achieving depth of expression when such was needed. Mr. Feuermann's playing of the short Adagio Cantabile was one of the supreme moments of the evening—a moment when a calm voice was somehow speaking with an almost unbearable eloquence.

After the Beethoven Sonata the concert declined rapidly in artistic value. Only the Grieg Sonata in A Minor was worthy of anyone's serious attention, and it has only a few moments of real expressiveness. The tidbits which Mr. Feuermann played were meant for a hotel dining room and Mr. Levitzki confined his solo performance to such staple pieces as the Chopin Nocturne in F Minor and the Paganini-Liszt "Camepanella."

Moreover, Mr. Levitzki's contributions to the evening's proceedings, aside from his playing in the Beethoven Sonata, were undistinguished and conspicuously uninteresting. It is probable that Mr. Levitzki was not entirely to blame. One is led to that conclusion by the fact that the piano, most of the time, sounded as if it were being played behind the scenes and under a bale of hay. Acoustic handicap, either in the piano or in the hall, may have been responsible. In any case, the piano performances were almost totally devoid of effective contrast or modeling.

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES

MR. and MRS. HARRY H. LANGENBERG, 49 Westmoreland place, will leave St. Louis about Jan. 20 for Tallahassee, Fla. to be the guest of Dwight F. Davis at his winter home, Meridian Plantation, near there. Mr. Davis entertains groups of friends at house parties given at frequent intervals during the winter season.

Announcement has been made informally of the engagement of Miss Madeline Blackman, daughter of Mrs. Ernest Blackman of Wartrace, Tenn., and Dr. Robert Todd Terry, son of Dr. and Mrs. Robert J. Terry, 5149 Westminster place.

Miss Blackman is a graduate of Ward-Belmont College, Nashville, where she specialized in music, in which she is talented. Dr. Terry is a graduate of Yale and of the Medical School of Washington University. During his internship he served for one year at St. Luke's Hospital here, a second at Vanderbilt Hospital in Nashville, and is now completing a third at the City Hospital in Baltimore. He is a grandson and namesake of the late Albert Todd, and is a brother of Charles S. Terry who married Miss Mary Colt Day in one of the most elaborate weddings of the season last December.

Mrs. Katherine Orr Nulsen, 5663 Bartmore avenue, and her children, Mary Orr and Norman Nulsen, have returned after a visit in Fish Creek, Wis., for winter sports. They were the guests there of Mrs. Freda Friedman of Milwaukee, who is keeping her summer home open this winter, and spent much of their time skiing and tobogganing on the snow-covered golf course, and on old fashioned sleigh rides.

Before returning Mrs. Nulsen and her children were entertained in Milwaukee by Mrs. John Thomas, whose daughter has been a counselor at Camp Meenahga, Fish Creek, which is owned by Mrs. Nulsen's aunt, Mrs. Alice Orr Clark.

Mr. and Mrs. Sterling E. Edmunds, 33 Vandewater place, left last night for Palm Springs, Cal., to be guests during their late winter stay at El Mirador Hotel. On the same train were Mr. and Mrs. Claude S. Kennerly, 28 Portland place, and their daughter, "Miss Noel, bound for Palm Springs, and later for Santa Barbara, to open their California home.

Miss Josie Conant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George K. Conant, 19 Portland place, returned Sunday to Ambler, Pa., to resume her studies at the School of Horticulture and Landscape Design after spending the midyear holidays with her parents.

Mrs. Benoit Carton, 4484 Westminster place, returned home Monday after one of her frequent visits this winter with her mother, Mrs. Julia G. Hurt, in Kansas City. Mrs. Hurt is recuperating in a hospital from injuries resulting from a fall, and during her last visit Mrs. Carton assisted in her mother's informal birthday celebration. Mrs. Miller Donovan, the former Miss Julia Fay Carton, and her young daughter, Judy, plan to visit Mrs. Hurt soon.

Mrs. J. Edgar Moser of the Warsaw road has returned from a visit to Washington where she has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Frank Slingsluff, wife of Commander Slingsluff, U. S. N.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerard McMahon, 233 Darst road, Ferguson, and their family plan to move to Toledo, O., this spring. Mr. McMahon's business has already taken him there, and Mrs. McMahon has just returned from a house-hunting trip with him. Their St. Louis home, 4660 Pershing avenue, is occupied by Mr. and Mrs. John B. Kennard Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Finley McElroy, 23 Portland place, will leave St. Louis today by motor for their annual visit to St. Petersburg, Fla. They will headquarter in an apartment there, and visit near-by resorts. Before returning home about four months hence, they will go to New York to visit their son, David, and to Buffalo, N. Y., to be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Howard McCain, the latter formerly Miss Jane McElroy.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Herrmann, 90 Arundel place, have received invitations for a cocktail party preceding the Bachelor Club ball Saturday night because of illness in their family. The party was to have been given in honor of Miss Grace White, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David B. White.

Mr. and Mrs. Aaron S. Rauh of Upper Ladue road and their daughter, Miss Elsie Rauh, will give a small dinner party at their home tonight in honor of Miss Blanche Fischel, debutante daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Walter Fischel, 14 Lenox place. The guests will be seated at two tables, decorated with white chrysanthemums and white tapers.

Miss Frances Fuqua Terrell will be hostess at a luncheon Monday at the home of her grandmother, Mrs. Benton Hall Pollock, 5861 East avenue, in honor of Miss Elsie Sortwell, a Boston debutante, who is the guest of Miss Lily Marshall Childers.

Madam Olga Samaroff Stokowski and her daughter, Sonia, have returned to their home in New York, after being called to St. Louis by the death of Madam Stokowski's father, Carlos Hickenlooper, while here, they were with Mrs. Hickenlooper, 4545 Maryland avenue.

Mrs. John Witherow and Mrs. Kennon Dunham of Cincinnati, daughters of Gen. Andrew Hickenlooper, of that city, who came to attend the funeral, have returned home.

Miss Delmar McCaskill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. McCaskill, 6637 Waterman avenue, became the bride of Dr. Francis J. Medler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Medler, 4114 Florissant avenue, at 9:30 o'clock this morning, at Our Lady of Lourdes Church, with the Rev. Francis J. O'Connor officiating. The chancel was banked with palms and baskets of spring flowers. Two vases of the flowers were also used on the altar. The ceremony was followed by a wedding breakfast at Glen Echo Country Club for the two families. The bride party was at a table garlanded with smilax and decorated with spring flowers and ivory tapers. The bride will be gowned in cream-colored satin, made simply with a high, monk neckline, long, tight sleeves and a train. Her veil of rose-point lace was worn by her aunt, Mrs. Frank Stokowski. She will carry an arm bouquet of lilies of the valley.

Miss Ruth Tuholske, wearing a frock of burgundy chiffon, gold-trimmed, will attend her sister as maid of honor, and another sister, Miss Betty Jane Tuholske, will be a bridesmaid. Her dress will be a royal blue chiffon, also gold-trimmed, against which she will carry tallisman roses. Miss Ruth's flowers will be Joanna Hill roses.

The bride's mother will be in purple chiffon and Mrs. Scharff will wear green. Both will have orchids arranged in a shoulder corsage.

Mr. Scharff and his bride will be at home after Feb. 15 at 5616 Pershing avenue.

She is a graduate of Mary Institute and attended Washington University.

Mr. Scharff, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Scharff, 3771 Waterman avenue, attended the University of Wisconsin.

Among the out-of-town guests at the wedding will be: Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rieffler of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Pater of Chicago; Miss Helene Greisinger of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Sam Levi, uncle and aunt of the bridegroom, from Minneapolis, and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Heffer of Kankakee, Ill., also an uncle and aunt of Mr. Scharff.

A luncheon was given at the Warfield Shop Monday for the St. Louis committee which is working for the League of Women Voters' national campaign for trained personnel in Government service. Guests were seated at one large table decorated with spring flowers. Besides members of the committee, there were four guests of honor. Mrs. Edgar P. Voll, representing the Council of Catholic Women's organizations; Mrs. Joseph T. Davis, president of the Missouri Federated Women's Clubs of the Eighth District; Mrs. John Barada, past State president of the American Legion Auxiliary, and Mrs. L. R. Hubele, representing the St. Louis Council of Parent-Teachers' Association. Members of the committee are Mrs. R. W. Thayer, Mrs. Jeanne Blythe, Mrs. B. T. Clifford, Mrs. John Francis, Mrs. E. J. Kerber, Mrs. Ivan H. Light, Mrs. W. B. MacCubbin, Mrs. E. A. Newfield, Mrs. W. E. Parker, Mrs. M. L. Rust, Mrs. Leo Rosenheim, Mrs. Leo Shanley and Mrs. Milton Tucker.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lasky, 408 South Hanley road, will entertain informally at the Forest Park Hotel, Sunday night at 8 o'clock, in honor of their daughter, Miss Bernice, whose engagement to Meyer Carp, 644 Vassar avenue, has been announced.

The wedding of Miss Helen Tuholske, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Lister Tuholske, 5115 Westminster, and Arthur Scharff Jr., will take place at 8 o'clock tonight at the home of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Wilton Rubenstein, 26 Southmoor drive. Dr. Samuel Sale, who performed the marriage ceremony for seven of his own children, will officiate at the wedding of his first grandchild in the presence of members of the two families. It will take place in the solarium of the Rubenstein home which will be adorned with white chrysanthemums and lighted by candles. At 9 o'clock reception for friends will follow the ceremony.

CITIZEN, IN ONE-MAN DRIVE, SMASHES SLOT MACHINES

Breaks One Device in Front of Police Headquarters at Augusta, Ga.

By the Associated Press.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Jan. 15.—B. Emory Wilcox is making a one-man fight against slot machines.

He seized one of the devices from a drug store yesterday and wrecked it in front of Police Headquarters.

The proceeds went to charity. A charge of breaking glass in the street was filed against him.

"I despise any machine that robs destitute families of money," explained Wilcox, a business man and World War Captain.

On Monday Wilcox smashed a machine in a drug store.

THREE FINED $100 ON CHARGES OF CARELESS DRIVING

Normandy Electrician Says He Ran Down Two Women in Swerving to Avoid Another Car.

William Brinkman, an electrician, 3516 Central place, Normandy, was fined $100 by Police Judge Simpson today on a charge of careless driving growing out of an accident last September in which he struck and injured two women with his automobile at Lindell boulevard and Taylor avenue. Brinkman said he had swerved to avoid striking another automobile when he ran down the women.

James Sinas, a clerk, 3729A Cottage avenue, was fined $100 by Judge Simpson on a similar charge that resulted from a collision last month of a car driven by Sinas and another car at Sarah avenue and Forest Park boulevard.

Andrew McKinnon, a Negro, 4247 Garfield avenue, was fined $100 by Police Judge Vest on a charge of carelessness, arising from an accident several weeks ago.

Two Children Perish in Fire.

ATHENS, O., Jan. 15.—Two of the four children of Frank Walton, a Morriston (O.) miner, were burned to death early today, when fire destroyed a three-room cottage. Walton and neighbors rescued two children. Mrs. Walton, overcome in an attempt to save the other two, Thelma, 9 years old, and Wilma, 2 years, was burned seriously. Coroner L. F. Jones said he believed an overheated stove caused the fire.

Clark then turned to the memoirs of Lord Grey, in which the former British Foreign Minister declared that "the will of the United States would have meant certain defeat for the Allies." After Paris was moved by the first battle of the Marne, he wrote, the Allies became dependent on supplies from the United States that it would have been better to abandon the blockade of Germany than to risk antagonizing the United States.

"And yet," Chairman Nye remarked, "he continued to send these strong notes to our Government insisting on our State Department to do the things which antagonized our citizens." "Well," Clark replied, "he can hardly be blamed for that, when he read that our Ambassador (Page) would deliver a protest to Lord Grey from our State Department, and say: 'Now that you have the note, how shall we answer it?' Lord Grey had good reason to assume that our protests were not made seriously."

against British treatment would yield "gradually to education and enlightenment." Accordingly, he wrote articles long and discursive, and constantly adverted to new subjects. He summed up his own method as follows:

"Everything was submerged in verbiage—and it was done with a deliberate purpose."

Clark then turned to the memoirs of Lord Grey, in which the former British Foreign Minister declared that "ill will of the United States would have meant certain defeat for the Allies." After Paris was saved by the first battle of the Marne, he wrote, the Allies became dependent on supplies from the United States that it would have been better to abandon the blockade of Germany than to risk antagonizing the United States.

"And yet," Chairman Nye remarked, "he continued to send these strong notes to our Government, insisting on Britain's right to do the things which antagonized our citizens." "Well," Clark replied, "he can hardly be blamed for that when he read that our Ambassador (Page) would deliver a protest to Lord Grey from our State Department, and say: 'Now that you have the note, how shall we answer it?' Lord Grey had good reason to assume that our protests were not made seriously."

Arguing in support of his contention that it was not German submarine warfare which got this country into the war, Clark pointed out that protests against the British embargo and the conduct of the blockade were made by us long before submarine warfare caused any complaint. He said the British sought to have us take an attitude which would either cripple the effectiveness of submarine warfare, or bring us into conflict with Germany.

That both President Wilson and Secretary Lansing saw through the British strategy, and temporarily ceased it, was indicated by correspondence produced in the State Department files. Britain urged the United States to insist on the right of American citizens to travel in armed merchant ships, and also to demand that such ships not be sunk without warning.

Commenting on this, Wilson wrote to Col. E. M. House that "it seems hardly fair to ask that submarines give warning if, when they approach the ship to give it, they will be fired upon." The same view was advanced by Lansing in a communication to Wilson in January, 1916. He pointed out that, in one instance, after a submarine had sunk a British merchantman, a tramp steamer approached, flying the American flag. The submarine stood by to give warning, whereupon the tramp ran up the British flag, and opened fire, sinking the submarine with all on board.

From this Lansing concluded it was time to draw up new regulations, but he made the unusual suggestion that the draft be kept secret from the Germans until it had been submitted to the Allies to ascertain whether they would accept it. The correspondence showed that Wilson assented to this arrangement. The draft was prepared and submitted to Great Britain and France.

"I might remark right here," Clark interposed, "that the regulations proposed in it were precisely the same as those laid down by Holland from the beginning of the war."

But they got the cold shoulder in London and Paris. Ambassador Page wrote that Lord Grey was seriously disturbed. Page made his own feelings so evident that Lansing told Wilson, "Page certainly is influenced by the atmosphere he is in, and I frequently doubt whether he urges the cases involving American rights with the force and vigor which the American Ambassador should." However, Lansing said there was nothing more to do about the proposed new rules "until we hear from the Allies."

"At this time," Clark interpolated, "Colonel House, although a private citizen, with no authority in the world to represent the country, was in London as a sort of super-Ambassador, negotiating with Lord Grey the secret agreement under which he practically committed the United States, under certain contingencies, to enter the war."

Lansing's proposal was rejected by the Allies, and he, in his reply, "French Ambassador Jusserand, accepted your decision as final."

Later in his memoirs, Lansing wrote that the Allies' refusal "was unwise, and undoubtedly resulted in the loss of hundreds of lives." He added that, as a matter of fact, "the British navy had committed more violations of law than the Germans, although the violations were not attended by the same chastly consequences."

Opposition by Stone.

Others thought likewise, and on Jan. 21 Lansing wrote to President Wilson that he had just finished a long conversation with Senator William J. Stone of Missouri. Stone, a Democrat, was chairman of the powerful Senate Foreign Relations Committee. The late Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts, he replied that they both involved rights. I said to him that the right of life was an inherent right, the loss of which could never be indemnified, but that the right of property was a legal right, which could be fully remedied by an indemnity. I could see, however, that this in no way satisfied him, for he then referred to German babies dying because Great Britain would not allow us to send them condensed milk, and followed it up with dyes, potash, etc., etc.

"This seems to be a serious matter, for, while I believe the Senator will not oppose the policies of the administration, I do not think he will support them wholeheartedly or enthusiastically. This is especially unfortunate with Senator Lodge radically pro-Ally at the head of the minority of the committee, and ready to take advantage of a situation which offers possibilities of political advantage."

"Probably Senator Stone is influenced by the fact that he has a considerable German constituency, which he wishes to keep in good humor, but whatever the reason, his ideas of our neutral duty will make it difficult for him to deal with our foreign affairs in a way that will strongly support the administration and carry through its policies."

Wilson replied that he thought Stone's attitude "comes from other quarters than the Senator's own thinking," but he would see him and endeavor to straighten him out.

"Meantime," Clark observed, "in line with Lansing's method of letting any subject drop when it met with the Allies' disapproval, his proposal to establish new rules for shipping was simply forgotten, and we hear no more of it. Lord Grey was 'seriously disturbed,' and that was enough to kill it. Furthermore, he was seeing Col. House every day."

Ambassador Gerard, never suspected of harboring pro-German sympathies, was also disturbed, for another reason. He wrote to Lansing:

"I think Germany was about to offer to sink no merchant ships without notice, put the crews in safety, etc., if England would consent to disarm merchant ships, but now both the Chancellor and Von

NEW HISTORY OF EVENTS THAT LED U. S. INTO WAR

Jagow says they are convinced that America has a secret understanding with England, and that nothing can be arranged.

Diary of Col. House.

On June 23, Col. House wrote in his diary: "I believe the French and British are prolonging the war unnecessarily. It is stupid to refuse our proffered intervention. It would mean the end of militarism, but it would also mean the end of the shoe pinches."

In July, the British published a "blacklist" of 84 American firms. Wilson was indignant. He wrote to House:

"I am, I must admit, about at the end of my patience with Great Britain and the allies. This blacklist business is about the last straw. It is becoming clear to me that there lies latent in this policy the wish to prevent our merchants getting a foothold in markets which Great Britain has hitherto controlled."

Clark introduced a cablegram from J. P. Morgan & Co. to its London office, stating that "there is really strong feeling and we don't believe it is political. The word 'blacklist' itself is most unpopular in American business circles, being associated with trade boycotts."

It alluded to a critical editorial in the New York Times as "fairly representative of the attitude of the pro-ally press," and added: "We ourselves have regretted the action."

House confirmed in his diary: "I will confess that the allies are irritating almost beyond endurance. It is evident they are trying to force us into war with Germany. Our prosperity and growing strength madden them."

Folk Suggested Embargo.

House recorded in October that he and Under-Secretary Frank Polk were agreed that the British were foolish about the blacklist, and that it was a question "how far the President will be justified in straining our relations with Great Britain rather than consent to their insolent methods of conducting their blockade."

The British had developed their own munitions supply, and to cut off the other supplies they were obtaining from the United States would precipitate a business panic which might have a serious influence on President Wilson's forthcoming campaign for re-election.

Note From Gerard.

From the plainspoken Gerard, in Berlin, came a report that the Germans were convinced by "the Allies' nasty note to Wilson" on the blacklist, that "The Americans are a fat, rich race, without sense of honor, and ready to stand for anything to keep out of war."

In a hitherto unpublished letter, Page told Wilson that the Allies had concluded a secret pact, and that, in order to obtain the Russian Czar's pledge not to make a separate peace, Britain and France had been compelled to promise Russia Constantinople and the Dardanelles.

There was grumbling from a new quarter. David R. Francis of St. Louis, American Ambassador to Russia, wrote to Lansing that the Russians were tired of British dictation, and were saying that "if they were going to have a commercial master, there was no reason to change from Germany."

Testimony of Wilson.

Reverting again to J. P. Morgan's personal declaration that submarine warfare was solely responsible for our entrance into the war, Clark read from President Wilson's testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on Aug. 19, 1919. Senator McCumber (Rep.), North Dakota, asked:

"Do you think if Germany had committed no act of war, or no act of injustice against our citizens, we would have gotten into this war?" Wilson replied: "I think so."

"You think we would have gotten in anyway?" "I do."

Morgan absented himself from Clark's morning history lecture, but the firm was represented by partners Lamont and Whitney and three lawyers.

with a net deficit of $26,099 in 1934, it was stated in the annual report, issued today. In the report the trustees said gifts and endowments continued to be the most pressing needs.

During 1935 the hospital had a record number of patients, 3323, and a record number of 96,308 days' service to all patients, including 59,715 days' care of ward patients. Of the total service days, 19,715 were free and 7632 were partly paid. Operating deficit for the year amounted to $167,325, reached by deducting operating revenue of $451,610 from expenses of operation totaling $618,936. Other income of $135,083 left the net deficit at $32,241.

Not Spoiled by Money.
Russian-German Problem.
Freedom of the Air.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE.
(Copyright, 1936.)

ANOTHER airplane record. Howard Hughes, flying 18,000 feet up much of the way, went from Los Angeles to Newark, in 9 hours 27 minutes, 10 seconds. High up where air resistance is less, using a super-charging engine and helping his own lungs with oxygen from a tank, Mr. Hughes beat the record of 10 hours, 2 minutes, 51 seconds, held by Col. Roscoe Turner.

Mr. Hughes proves that being rich does not always spoil young Americans. He flew from ocean to ocean without a stop, 2450 miles, at an average rate of 260 miles an hour.

Germany's Government worries about Russia, and what may happen in a year or two when Russia's present industrial plans are completed. At the start of his dictator-career Chancellor Hitler denounced Russia and all its works. Hitler and Stalin do not love each other. Russia has been building what may be Europe's biggest air fleet, plus a powerful submarine fleet and a gigantic army.

War between Russia and Germany might smooth out other European difficulties, removing French anxiety about Hitler's plans. Napoleon discovered that conquering Russia is a problem not easily solved. If Hitler once became involved in that direction, he might find an outlet for all his unused energy.

Stalin might find himself busy on two fronts in case Japan, seeing Hitler start, should try to eliminate the objectionable Vladivostok air and submarine bases now aimed at Japan's coast, shipping and factories.

Under the circumstances it is pleasing to read that Hiram Johnson of California, and some others have decided to oppose Secretary of State Hull's plan for a Government of the United States, shared by Great Britain and other countries.

Senator Johnson and some of his associates feel that this country showed weak knees and a yellow streak when it allowed England to regulate our commerce in the big war. Hiram Johnson favors absolute and complete freedom of the seas for this country and complete neutrality. Welcome news.

Big broadcasting companies refuse to allow the Republican party to broadcast "laughable skits" on the "New Deal."

Now, or after some worth while upheaval, "freedom of the air" will have to be dealt with as was "freedom of the press" when the Constitution was written.

For radio companies to say to the party in power, "because we fear you we shall take you to every home in the country and let you say what you please, and shall refuse to give the same publicity to your opponents," might not suit the American idea.

A Board of Trade appeals to President Roosevelt to prevent the passage of the bonus bill by Congress, fearing that to allow the soldiers to receive and spend their bonus, would mean inflation. Inflation need not alarm them, for we have inflation now. Ask Mr. Jesse Jones of RFC. Bank vaults are bursting with money and if bankers ever recover confidence and begin lending there will be such inflation as will remind you of the Johnstown flood.

There is rioting in Puerto Rico, numbers killed and wounded in various places. It is said a Puerto Rico "young men's party" has decided to separate Puerto Rico from the United States, inspired perhaps by the departure of the Philippines.

It is supposed that this Government will tell the "young Puerto Rico gentlemen" that they will not be allowed to separate and might as well forget about it.

This country in the way of protection, resources, education and civilization, is necessary to Puerto Rico and strategically Puerto Rico is useful to the United States. What would England say if Jamaica should announce "we wish to leave the British Empire?"

The Philippines, now free to rule themselves until Japan or somebody decides to take them over, announce that their police force is being formed into an army. It will take a great deal of patriotism and military genius to oppose the Japanese military machine, airplanes included, with an army like that.

Paris reports negotiations for an English loan to France of four billion francs, $264,800,000.

The British may want to strengthen Premier Leval, with whom they deal more comfortably than with the average Frenchman.

Slam Bids With Intelligence

By Ely Culbertson

BEFORE the inclusion in the Culbertson system of the "void showing convention," countless hands that contained 12 sure tricks had to be signed off at game levels. There was simply no way to tell whether a partner's advertised tricks corresponded to the other hand's void, making one or the other useless, or worse in a fitting suit when the opponents were kind enough to bid, it is true that an overall in their suit was effective, but without this friendly assistance, slam bidding suffered.

Today's hand is a good example of the absolute necessity for the void showing convention. South, dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

South West North East
1 diam'd Pass 3 hearts Double Pass Pass 4 diam'd Pass
6 diam'd (final bid)

THE moment North heard his partner bid one diamond, slam possibilities were evident. But it was vital to know whether duplication of values was present—that is to say, whether North's void heart suit was duplicated—and vitally, by high honor strength in hearts held by South. In only one way could the information be extracted—by telling South about his own void and letting South decide whether this, with its implications of side strength, was good or bad.

South's jump from four to six diamonds was predicated entirely on the assurance that his spade ace and club queen, not being duplication of values, would be good fitting cards. Had he held the heart ace instead of the spade ace, he would have bid only five diamonds, and there the contract would have rested.

West opened his fourth best heart and dummy ruffed. The other hearts were eliminated from the South hand by ruffs in dummy, during which process the adverse trumps also were drawn. Three rounds of spades voided North and South of that suit. Now declarer led a low club from his hand and played the nine from dummy—whatever the club honor situation changed to, this avoided the "guess" and insured that only one trick could be lost.

TODAY'S QUESTION:

Question: I was on lead against three no trump, the bidding having been one no trump by South, three no trump by North—no intervening bids. My hand was:

BEDLAM Is Normal for Jimmy DURANTE

If the Comedian Is Not Doing Something, He's Seeing—Everybody

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.

AN inquisitive person seeking a bird's-eye view of pandemonium can do worse than station himself in a strategic corner of the cubicle occupied by the indefatigable Jimmy Durante, head man of "Jumbo," as he prepares for his dual exercises at the Hippodrome. So diverse are Durante's activities, so continuous his chores, professional and voluntary, so violent his methods, that the wonder is that he survives a week. In the holiday period just ended Durante hit a hysterical pace that would put a less enduring player in a private ward.

Billy Rose, who presides over the Hippodrome like an Indian potentate, observing Durante's dervish maneuvers, sought to call a halt on some of his extra-curricular activities by addressing a wire to the Sixth Avenue Cyrano in which he recommended peace and quiet—fewer benefits and a curtailment of the charitable that rage without cessation in the Durante dressing room.

Rose was led to this by reports that his star with seven days, in addition to playing 13 performances of "Jumbo" and a radio broadcast with three four-hour rehearsals of the same, had found time in his schedule to:

(a) Play Santa Claus, fully whiskered and booted, for two hours at an uptown restaurant for 200 children.

(b) Sing half an hour at the Paradise as a favor to Ben Bernie.

(c) Escort Mayor F. H. LaGuardia's children through the Hippodrome menagerie between acts.

(d) Listen to the latest Hollywood tales from Charles MacArthur as he made a costume change.

(e) Submit to 16 interviews by dramatic editors of high school magazines.

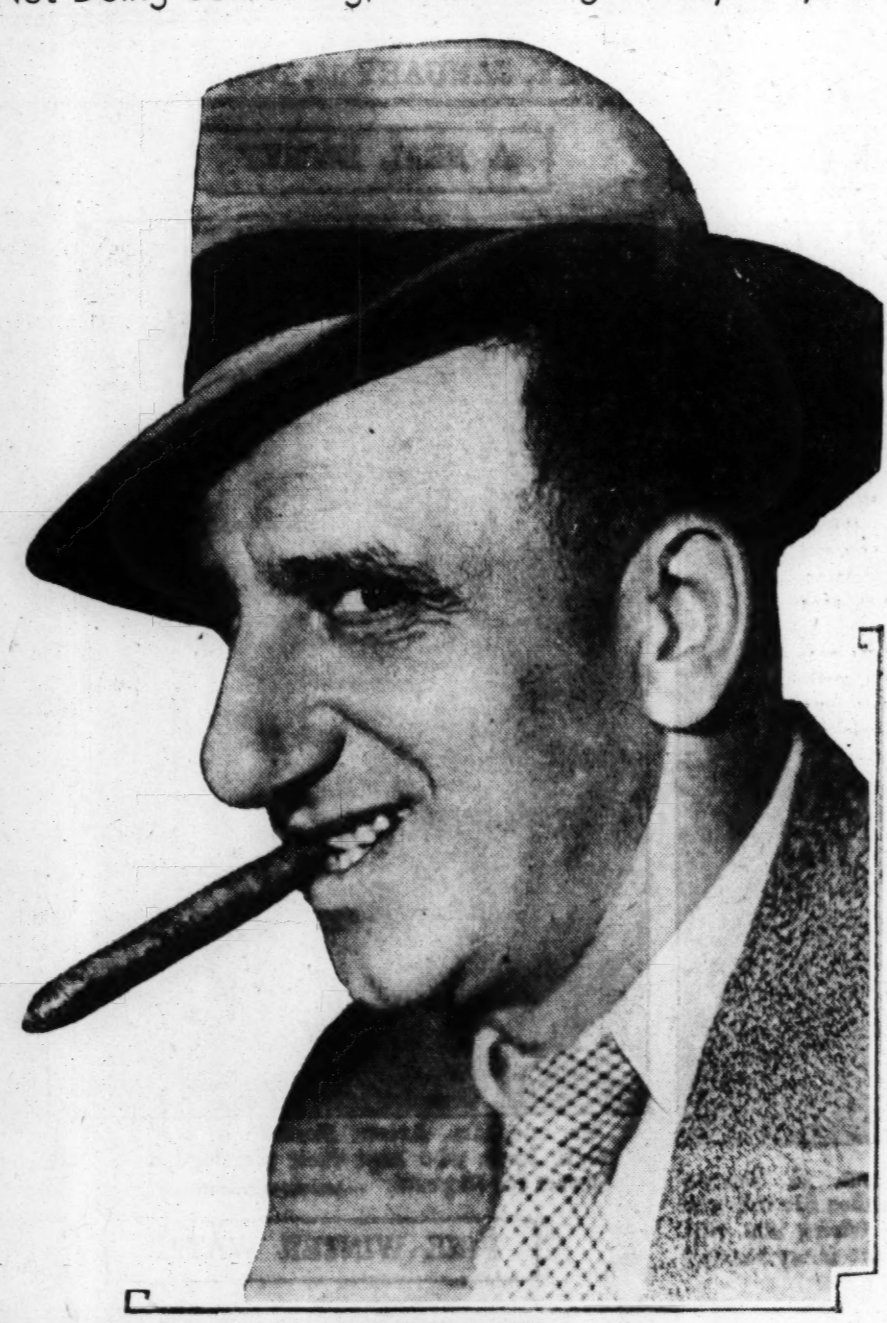

Listen to fanatic gentlemen who wish him to endorse beauty parlors, shoes, whisky, hats, perfumes, skis, "kiddie cars" and ivory elephants.

If Durante's dressing room is a composite of a bus terminal, the Automat and an Elks' lodge meeting, it can be traced to the fact that he never forgets a face or a name, and no name or face ever forgets him. Police men without portfolio in search of a quick one, retired waiters, cabaret performers, musicians, checkroom boys find a haven where they may while away a few hours in dressing room No. 1 at the Hippodrome. All these must do their whirling standing, because the single comfortable chair in the Durante quarters is occupied invariably by the occupant of the adjoining dressing room—Paul Whiteman. And when Whiteman sits in a chair he fills it.

It was this same Whiteman who at Christmas presented to Durante a handsome radio and six new neckties. The radio, hooked to an electric light socket, blew out all the fuses in the wing of the Hippodrome inhabited by these two cronies.

Two companions of Durante's night club days are his secretaries, his spiritual advisers, his confidants and his buffers. They are Jack Roth, who for 16 years has been identified as Durante's drummer, and Harry Donnelly, for 10 years his piano player. Now that Durante needs neither drummer nor pianist, they serve him continuously in such ways as friends of long standing serve.

A gentleman of simple tastes, Durante asks but little here below. Roth and Donnelly are authorities for the statement that he owns but two suits and, prior to the Whiteman bounty, but two neckties, and a single overcoat. He would rather get two months in the stocks than don a dinner coat, and last week upset the management by appearing in the foyer just before the start of "Jumbo" in his shirt-sleeves, escorting the wife of the Mayor's secretary to her seat.

DURANTE's following ragas, sporting and social, gives the state-door man of the Hippodrome some bad half hours. The Rose ruling reads that no other member of the company is to enter during the performance, but the occupants of the Durante dressing room at any given moment would indicate that they must have tunneled around that guardian. A holiday matinee saw former Gov. Alfred E. Smith and an entourage of 12 children exchanging banter with the nasal one, James J. Bradock and Max Schmeling standing in attendance, three photographers, a Prince editor, a barber, one waiter with apron, a man with an atomizer that needed indoring, an unemployed tuba player, three press agents, an equestrian from "Variety," a spent runner from a bank, a first baseman, two plain-clothesmen, a chauffeur and a gentleman of the cloth—all these beating at the Durante door.

It is Rose's boast that "Jumbo" can and does play to 4500 persons at a single performance. Durante could play to as many in his dressing room, did space and fire regulations permit.

The Finale of The Pernicious Anemia Worry

Once a Moot Medical Question Certain Cure Ends Fatalities.

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

"WOULD you at an early date, write an article on pernicious anemia? Is there a cure for it?" writes A. V. of Urbana, Ill.

Fifteen or more years ago, when we all came back from the war—camp or front, as the case might be—there was a great deal of discussion of a condition called "pernicious anemia." Why there should have been, I do not rightly know; perhaps because we hadn't seen any of the disease in the army—our patients were too young—and we were tired of the endless discussions about influenza, were glad to change the subject and think about the chronic diseases of middle-aged people.

I remember the discussions about treatment—one person advocating transfusion, the other condemning it, the use of hydrochloric acid, and arsenic, and removal of the spleen. Well, those discussions are all over now, quite out of date. There is no discussion of pernicious anemia any more. In fact, there is no pernicious anemia, complete or partial. A successful treatment came along about 10 years ago and took the "pernicious" out of the name. In fact, if the treatment is faithfully carried out it takes the "anemia" out, too.

Hears Report

Last fall I heard the report of a physician who has charge of a large hospital devoted to these cases. He told of the condition of 500 people who had been on the liver treatment for from five to 10 years. Most of them were entirely well; some of them had died, but of automobile accidents, or heart failure, or pneumonia, or old age—not of the disease itself, which 15 years ago we considered inevitably fatal.

Now this is quite remarkable record. As short a time as 10 years ago a patient who had pernicious anemia went to the doctor, and the doctor knew that in spite of any treatment he could apply that patient would, in all probability, be dead in four years. Now the patient can be assured that if a simple, harmless treatment, entirely free from troublesome or discomfort, is carried out, that death will be postponed indefinitely.

These things were well publicized 10 years ago, when this treatment was first announced. From my reader's question, as put at the head of this article, it is evident that a whole generation has grown into the pernicious anemia zone without knowing it. It was of no interest to them 10 years ago because they were not at the dangerous age. Anemia of this type appears usually in the middle-age period. It can be suspected most readily in a person who has "spells" (lasting several weeks or months) of weakness, with a peculiar waxy color of the skin, and frequently no loss of weight.

The principles of treatment will be discussed later.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Six pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

Dear Practical Aunt B:

Every time me and my wife plan to go somewhere she is all excited, but sure enough, by the time we are ready to go she is always in tears. Just emotional. How would you advise me to cope with the situation—or is there anything a man can do? Some say he should be patient. Others say he should be tender.

IF YOU ASK MY OPINION

By Martha Carr

Dear Mrs. Carr:

T 18, I feel 90. This must sound just a little odd to you, but here are the facts:

A few years ago, in grammar school, I got into the habit of always trying to make myself noticeable and stay in the limelight. This calamitous habit stuck with me throughout grammar school, and my first year of High. Now, Mrs. Carr, after going about quite a bit and making a fool of myself, I finally caught on. But, it seems, in changing, I have lost most of my friends.

Before, I could talk to my girl friends and have them respond nicely; but now, what I say sounds stale and shopworn.

I am now getting good grades at school, but still, something is lacking. I have a very good reputation, but it doesn't do me any good. I cannot even get up the nerve to ask for a date anymore; and when I go out everything goes awry—NOT. When I first meet a girl everything goes along fine, for about five minutes, then I say some dumb thing, and it breaks up.

Please give me some advice, Mrs. Carr, and you may be sure that I will abide by whatever you say.

PRECOCIOUS.

The difficulty is, I think, that you are maturing more rapidly than the crowd you go with. You have held the mirror up to yourself and found that you are not satisfied with the reflection of a feel that you must put something more worthwhile into your life. And while you have this picture of yourself, and the newly aroused ambition, you only half-heartedly enjoy the companionship of your young friends who remain rather stationary mentally.

This is no novel experience, you will find out. It is not because you have grown stale; it is because you need the companionship of those whose interests will bestir you. Evidently, the thing for you to do is widen your sphere, make new acquaintances among those whose maturity is keeping pace with yours. There is no reason to hold yourself back when you can progress more rapidly than those around you. You need not be precocious, in the sense of pushing your presence and your ideas into the spotlight. There are many, of your age and older, with whom you can enjoy keeping pace, both in ambition and mentality.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I HOPE that you will find space to print this for the benefit of "Wall Flower." I am 15, but I heartily agree with your answer to her. And now I would like to tell her a thing or two from my angle of the question.

Now, "Wall Flower," you said, "all girls of 15 and 16 are 'very crazy.'" Well, don't be so sure of yourself. I am not boy crazy and I know a large number of other girls of that age who are not boy crazy. They are not prudish, old maidish, or anything like that. And the boys like them. So if you are afflicted, do not let them know it; it is both cheap and unpsychological.

And, after this (when you have cooled off a bit) hope is something else to ponder: Did you ever ask yourself why you were placed in this world?

Many young people wonder about that, but few do anything about it. You were put on the earth to do your share in making it a better place to live. That is the purpose of living. Can you accomplish anything toward it if you waste all your time in your youth worrying about dates? Friendship is a priceless thing, but not if you mistake it for a silly relationship between boys and girls who are too young to know what life is all about. You must have to be a genius to do your share and you don't have to be an extremist. But it is your duty to find out if you have anything inside of you, to discover what you can do and do it!

Life is much shorter than you realize. ALSO FIFTEEN.

DESIRE to write a business letter to Mrs. Roosevelt, wife of the President. Will you please tell me how to address her at the beginning of my letter? I want to have the correct form. Also, would it not be better to write a letter than to type it?

Since this is to be a business communication, I think you might send it typed. The volume of correspondence is so great that I imagine her secretary is grateful for typed ones, especially those of a purely business nature.

"My dear Mrs. Roosevelt:" is the proper beginning of your letter. "Yours very truly," or "Yours sincerely," the proper ending. The Post-Dispatch should be "Very Truly," if you are married, underneath the signature write in parenthesis

Life at Its Lowest Ebb

By BECK

ISN'T SHE A DARLING, GEORGE. SHE'LL BE SUCH GOOD COMPANY FOR YOU AND SNOZZLE.

My DAY by Eleanor Roosevelt

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.

I WENT shopping this morning. It has always been my contention that anything you wanted could be found in New York City, but don't be led astray and think that this can be done in a hurry.

Today is Col. Howard's birthday and I wanted a Cheddar shawl to take back to him, because someone once brought me one from England and he has always admired it. After trying in three different places and in each place being told that they had never heard of a Cheddar shawl, I began to get discouraged. Of course, I do not know whether I spelled it correctly, but I could describe it very successfully.

Finally, on my last try, I found someone who at least knew what I was talking about and who promised to continue to canvass New York for me in an effort to obtain one. So much for shopping in the Metropolis.

Afterwards I went to lunch at the Dutch Treat Club, the weekly assemblage of artists and writers. I admit that I was a bit nervous and it is lucky for me that I rarely eat much lunch, for somehow I did not have much appetite!

Fortunately the program began with two delightful gentlemen who made you laugh, willy-nilly, no matter how quaky you felt inside. Then for a few minutes I forgot everything else existed, as a very lovely voice filled the room.

Miss Fisher of the Metropolitan Opera Company sang two songs. She is an American and comes from West Virginia—two things which added to my interest. Some time I hope to have another chance

Broiled Lamb Chops

When you are having a particularly nice luncheon it is nice to have the butcher cut the lamb chop double thickness, remove bone and skewer the chop into shape. One chop is sufficient for a service. Broil on a greased broiler until both sides are browned well and the fat is crisp. Garnish with sprigs of parsley or watercress.

Flocks of white showing through the fiber of raw meat means the meat will have more flavor and be more tender than without them.

Yorkshire Pudding

Delightful over the roast of beef, as any Englishman will tell you. One-half hour before the roast of beef is done, beat four eggs lightly, add one pint sweet milk and one teaspoon salt and stir in smoothly enough flour to make a batter of waffle-like thickness. Take out of the roasting pan the juices needed to make a good gravy and into the amount left in the sizzling hot pan pour the batter around the roast. The juices will go all through it in the half hour left to cook and the result will be one you will wish to repeat.

ence might laugh at you? How do you suppose a child feels when

Angelo Patri
he discovers that he has been used as a clown for the entertainment of grown up people? That discovery is certain, and the child will react to it according to his temperament.

Some children who have been trained to do such things never get over it. They have a feeling of unfitness, the feeling that overwhelmed them when they discovered that they had been used as toys. The self-respect that sustained them to that point, broke down, and never again were they sure of themselves. When the feeling of uncertainty becomes too heavy to bear they become the life of the party once more, and once more they feel the pain of being belittled by those they delighted to serve.

There are other ways of making children toys of a passing hour.
They serve as outlets for grown up people's emotions. Are they joyful? The children are petted and indulged to excess. Are they miserable? The children are made to suffer accordingly. Are they suffering any of the mental reactions to frustration? Again the children are misreated, their spiritual integrity undermined, the foundation for mental instability securely laid.

Children ought to be regarded as people. They are little; they are helpless for a time; they are inexperienced to a degree, but they are people. Their rights to spiritual respect, their rights to spiritual integrity, sound mental health, sound physical health, humane care, are fundamental. Any adult with a spark of common sense agrees to all that; agrees that children should be protected from the over-emotionalization of the adults with whom they are associated. Things seem to be mending in this relation, but there is still oceans of room for it.

Mothers are filled with pride in their children, fathers often more so. That pride frequently imposes hardships on the children. All mature people have troubles, moods, heights and depths of emotional life. The children should be shielded from any excess in these expressions. Anger caused by personal failure, joy caused by personal success, grief that is personal, ambition that is selfish, ought to be modified in the presence of children, if possible.

If it is not possible, and we know there are times when human endurance can stand no more, try to avoid making the children the outlet for the strained nerves. Try to get away by yourself until you can control yourself and present a calm front, at least, to the children. It is unfair to make them scapegoats, escapes or toys. They are people with people's rights. And they will remember.

Mr. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children.

inclosing a 3-cent stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

What Genuine Faith in Men Depends On

When It Is Upset By Another's Behavior It Is Merely Interference.

By Elsie Robinson

IT'S one of those after-Christmas Grouches. She's mad because the Joneses spent their $20 Christmas check for shoddy silk stockings, brass jewelry and tickets to the fights. Buying trash like that when they're practically starving! Besides—that $20 represented a considerable sacrifice. Altogether she was a fool to give it. But it's a new year and she seemed "so deserving."

Well—she's had her lesson! She'll never again be taken in by people like that—never! She's learned at last that it doesn't pay to believe in people or be kind-hearted and generous. The always trick you—take advantage of you—

Sounds familiar, doesn't it? You've made just such noble gestures yourself and been sorry for them after—time to you—
So we all. But we have no right to be.

Faith is a beautiful gesture, but it is also hazardous. If we wish to enjoy its privileges and pleasure, we must also accept its risk.
And we've no business to penalize the other fellow or ourselves for against the whole human race. If our optimism proves expensive or misplaced.

Faith is hazardous because it gambles on a strength and stability which most of us do not yet possess. It presupposes that the Other Fellow will prefer oatmeal and winter flannels to brass jewelry and fight tickets, and nine times out of 10 he WON'T. Then what?
Why, then, if your Faith has been based on his purchase of oatmeal, you're certainly out of luck.

But you've no right to base your Faith on any such supposition.
Such an attitude isn't "Faith" at all.
It's simply a desire to get your own way—to run another life according to your notions. And you deserve all you get if such purely selfish plans miscarry—as they nearly always do.

Real Faith doesn't depend upon the Other Fellow's behavior as you think he should. Real Faith believes in the Other Fellow—bets on his innate decency and fairness and believes in him—believes he'll live in him through all bewilderment.

Real Faith says: "I don't understand this man. I don't like the things he does. He disappoints and discourages me constantly. Yet I believe in him. I believe he'll try to make good in spite of his failures. And even though I can't explain him or admire him, or even trust him, I'm still going to have faith in him and bank on his coming through."

That's how real Faith thinks and acts. And if you can believe in that spirit, you'll find Faith to be the finest gesture, the widest adventure of all your life.

Faith is NEVER a bad bet. Faith never fails you. The Other Fellow may fail you, but never Faith.
Faith is always a Smart Move. . . always pays big dividends. . . it is always FUN.

It's infinitely pleasanter to believe in people than to fear and suspect them, and wins far more philosophy. And not let the Other

Fight for That 'Work Baby' by Henrietta Ripperger

PSYCHIATRISTS—those people who can tell you why you act the funny way you do—call women's jobs "Work Babies." Don't ask me why. Maybe because women get emotional about them and will fight for them, just as they will for their children.
Anyway, that's their phrase and it's a pretty good one.

Like children, jobs need to be given the once over every now and then. If you are an intelligent mother, you have your baby examined 'from time to time, even if it seems to be thriving. If you are wise, you give your job the O. O. once in a while. Is it coming along nicely, or has it seemed sick lately? Is in danger? That's what you want to know.

According to these psychologists, a lot of people are in trouble because they won't admit to themselves that a job is out of date. Here is an actual example.
A woman comes in to get help in finding work.
"What are you equipped to do?" they ask her. She says she learned basketry and weaving during the great war, and taught them to the wounded soldiers in the hospital during their convalescence. There are extremely few such jobs today. But she won't see it. The work suited her perfectly. She liked the handicraft and she loved sick boys. She won't admit even to herself that she must look for something other than her old work. Her work baby is dead, but she is still hanging over it. She doesn't want a new one.

Instead, she feels that the world has no place for her. She thinks she isn't wanted. She won't look at the world as it is in 1935 and try to fit herself into the picture.

Or, a machine has replaced her, and so she thinks she is no good. She won't learn a new method.
This sort of thing has been going on for a hundred years. When machines to weave cloth were first invented, the hand weavers rioted and broke them up. They were bitter and obstinate. They would not work in the new way. Within our own time cash girls used to run around stores carrying change.
They still do in some places. Now the pneumatic tubes in one Manhattan department store alone would make a pipe line from New York to New Haven, if anybody wanted to do it, though Heaven knows why they should. The tubes put the cash girls out of work. Probably some of them went home and felt sorry for themselves and got no where, but the smart ones learned to work with the new equipment, and are now sitting at tables where the tubes pour out the money, making change again under different conditions.

So they say, you mustn't let a dying job get you down, no matter how baby you may feel. It's really dying look for a more promising one. Don't fix your heart on this one. After all, a job isn't really a baby. It's just a job, and another one may be better. Remember it's the job that's sick, not you.

A few days ago we saw some two dozen dress figures huddled in the alley back of a well known dressmaking establishment. They were sizes 32 and 34.
Nobody came in any more to ask for clothes in these sizes, so there they stood like ghosts of our well-faded days in the rain. The figures were obsolete, not the women. The women, you can be pretty sure, have taken off weight and are going strong in the new size 48. People can always change, even if figures and jobs can't.

Even if a job looks perfectly healthy, however, you got to keep your eye on it, just as you have to on a child. A lot of things threaten it, especially if you are a woman.

THERE is no question but there has been a great deal of under-handed effort in the past hard years to crowd women out of work (of paid work, that is there is no crowding to be first at the unpaid work around the house). There is no reason in the world why women should stand for this, yet it is going on all the time under the surface, and in the open too.

On April, 1932, the Federal Government passed an Economy Act. On the face of it, economy is a good idea. This act allowed the Government to cut down expenses by laying off one of a married couple when the other had a job. Even this isn't unfair. But the act was used, according to residents at Washington, to push women out of Government jobs which many of them had held for years. Yet many of them were supporting relatives just as men do. Big concerns are in many cases frankly trying to hire men rather than women and dismissing married women.

Baked Creamed Potatoes.
Boil six medium sized potatoes in their jackets until tender. When cold, peel and chop fine. Add three-fourths cup of cream or rich milk, one-fourth cup of minced parsley, salt and pepper. Pack very solidly into well-buttered baking cups and bake until a golden crust is formed.
It will take from one-half to three-quarters of an hour to cook in a medium hot oven. Turn out on platter surrounding the guinea chicken and garnish with parsley.

Meringue Basket.
Beat the whites of six eggs until very stiff and dry. Gradually, spoonful by spoonful, beat in one and a half cups of fine granulated sugar. When half of the sugar is added, add one tablespoon of lemon juice and one teaspoon of vanilla and continue adding sugar, beating meringue and paper and carefully remove to a large round serving platter. Fill with frozen rum pudding and top with small meringues.

Frozen Rum Pudding.
One pint of milk.
Three egg yolks.
One teaspoon of vanilla.
Two-thirds cup sugar.
One pint heavy cream.
One-half cup of candied cherries.
Three-fourth cup blanched and shredded almonds.

One-half cup rum.

ingredients and let stand one hour.
Soak the cut-up cherries in the rum to soften. Whip the cream stiff, add to the custard and freeze.
When the cream is nearly frozen add the nuts, rum and cherries,

"Some concerns are dismissing married women and hiring men."

At a national educational conference last spring there was a great deal of feeling shown against women's place in the profession.

These are danger signs for your jobs. It has always been hard for women to get equal pay for equal work, and now they are being told to get out of work to make room for men.

So watch it. Women vote. They elect legislatures and executives who enforce laws. Women have a stranglehold on business. (They are said to spend 87 per cent of the family income in the shops.)
Women are also said to control 7 per cent of the country's great fortunes. While these fortunate women aren't working for money, many are working without pay to help their own sex in industry. (Give them credit for that!)

And another thing. Don't let the work baby come between you and your husband. It doesn't need to.
Some men are jealous of children because they want all of their wives' attention. Some husbands are jealous of their wives' jobs for the same reason.
That's natural. It takes a real man, a good egg through and through, to be willing to let his wife have interests outside of his and the home. But many a husband, who begins by wanting his wife to sit in the house and knit, ends by saying, "For heaven's sake, go out and get a job!" And then clicking those needles! (especially the ends of the round needle. That one baffles him). He finds his wife better company when she has something more to think about than matching yarn.

It's all in where you sit anyway. Before the war, every good housekeeper baked bread, muffs and cake at home. When the war came, they were far too busy to bake. Without anyone really noticing it, families began to buy all their bread and rolls and most of their cake and women took paid jobs. Who cares? Nine-tenths of the bakery stuff is now better than that made by the average cook at home.

So don't quibble over little details or allow your job to become an issue. Unless you are financially lucky, you can't choose between working and not working, so don't side with your job against a husband or a family, any more than you would side with a child against him. Handle it right.

Carefully watched, the Work Baby will grow to be healthy and a comfort to the whole family.

MEFOFSKY was induced to buy a horse. He discovered that the initial investment wasn't the worst of it. The horse's appetite was terrific. Mefoof complained to a friend. "And wot's de matter vit dis huss?" asked the pal. "He lts epples," shrieked Mefoofsky, "like dey grow hon trees!" They say it happened to Clark Gable, who is a nice guy. A female reporter, interviewing him, unwittingly made a reference to his ears and she blushed over the faux pas. "I don't mind if you kid about my ears," Gable reassured her. "I know they're big." "They only seem big," said the quick-thinking guy tactfully, "because your head isn't."

Holding Forth.

Charles Holding observes that 1935 will go down in history as the year in which the American people were cured of the idea that they could make money out of chain letters.

On Broadway.

Opportunity knocks only once—and then everybody else starts in.

Broadway Etiquette.

A Broadwayite and his wife, both having bad coughs, decided to go to a show. Anyhow, submits Arthur Murray. Before entering the theater, the wife had an idea. "Maybe," she suggested, "we ought to buy some cough drops." "What!" exclaimed the groom, "and disturb everybody with our crunching?"

Overheard.

An insomnia-sufferer went to his doctor, who advised him to drink a pint of milk before retiring. The next day the patient returned, complaining that it didn't work. "Did you do as I ordered?" asked the physician. "Did you drink a pint of milk?" "Yeh," was the reply, "and it certainly took a heluva lot of coffee to do it!"

Oop!

Howard Lally says he overheard this dialogue at a Broadway premiere 10 minutes after the curtain lifted, when a critic asked out: "Where are you going?" "The worried producer," the asked has just begun!" "My my," said the drummer-damner, "how time drags!"

Heheheh.

Fred Allen claims he has found the world's homeliest midget. His face would stop a wrist watch.

Shrimp Sauce

Delicious over plain broiled halibut. Make a pint of white sauce and season with lemon juice, salt and pepper. Add three-quarters cup chopped fresh shrimp and a drop of carmine to color. Let simmer in a double boiler for a few minutes and then serve over the fish. Garnish with slices of hard-boiled egg.

A few chopped nuts are good in graham muffins.

PATHS of GLORY

The 181st Is Back on the March, Headed for a Mad Venture, While Col. Dax Hides His Emotions.

CHAPTER THREE.

THE tail of the regiment vanished on the other side of the highway, enlarging at each step the gap between itself and the Cafe du Carrefour.

"To the trenches, again," said the old woman as the last hobnail of the column was silent on the continuation of the dirt road beyond the cobblestones—her cobblestones, as she was in the habit of thinking of them. She was sitting by her stove in the carefully shuttered cafe, sipping her bowl of black coffee. "To the trenches, again." She did not add "Poor devils!" because no such commiserating thought came into her head. She merely made an oral note of a fact. She had sat there, like that, for the better part of two years, ticking off to herself the mysterious and aimless movement of the armies which fluctuated around her crossroads.

There was a rumble on the road outside which drew nearer as she finished her bowl of coffee. She gave the stove a poke and two, lighted a candle, and blew out the lamp. She moved over to a door and, candle in hand, paused for a moment, listening.

"Rolling kitchens," she said. Then she went down into her cellar and climbed into bed.

Col. Dax was marching at the head of his regiment with the officer commanding its first battalion, Maj. Vignon.

"It always looks like a distant thunderstorm, doesn't it?" the Major said. He was referring to the effect of sheet lightning produced by the flares along the front and the reverberating overtone of gun fire.

"Not so distant, at that," the colonel answered in a voice that did not encourage any further small talk. The major took the hint and relapsed into silence. But why, he asked himself, had he been invited to walk with his chief? Was it merely for the purpose of keeping step with him?

"It's too bad," the colonel was thinking, "that you can't ask a man to walk with you without his jumping to the conclusion that you want him to talk to you. Why can't I say to a man, 'Look here, I'm getting into a blue funk, as I always do at this point, and I really need your companionship. But I must be your silent companion. I just want your bulk, your flesh near me, within touching distance. It takes the edge off my funk and helps a lot.' But Vignon wouldn't understand at all. He'd think I'm mad. He just hasn't the faculty for knowing what I'm going through now. If he suspected the crisis I'm getting near, he'd consider it his duty, probably, to pull his pistol and put a bullet through my head. As a matter of fact that's exactly what I need his presence so badly at these times. He hasn't any nerves."

He was right, too. Neither Vignon nor anybody else suspected for a moment that Dax, colonel of the 181st Regiment of the line, of the crack Assolant Division, next on the list for a general's stars and a promotion in the Legion of Honor, four times cited for bravery in Army Orders—no one suspected for a moment, so well did Dax conceal the fact, that he was in a state of fear which was rapidly turning into panic. This fear of his was, so far as he knew, an idea that he was going to be taken, one which became more acute every time he had to perform the duty of leading his regiment in-Doom broods over the 181st Regiment of the line on the spring day in 1915 when it marches back to a rest area after being under severe fire for several days on the western front. Private Langlois, returning from leave, and Recruit Duval, anxious for his baptism of fire, are about to join this famous French regiment. They note the ominous speed of a corporal dispatch rider—a few hours later there is a fatal conference at divisional headquarters, well in the rear, where the Army Commander is telling the Division Commander, General Assolant, that the Commander in Chief is much upset because a German strong point—called the Pimple—has not been captured. "No wonder," it is a miniature Gibraltar," Gen. Assolant declares. It develops that, through a mistake, the capture of the Pimple was reported in a daily communique. Assolant indignantly declares: "You are going to ask me to take with my bayonets what a G. H. O. ink-slinger has captured at the point of his pen. That offended the Army Commander."

SYNOPSIS:

thousand men, two kilometers of massed flesh. What a target! "What's that light over there?" His imagination suddenly slipped, then righted itself in front of another mirage. He saw, way over there across the lines, German gunners, grotesquely helmeted figures, moving in quiet efficiency around their guns. He saw them ramming shells and charges home and closing the breeches, reading gauges, twirling wheels. He saw the great cannon, mouths still smoking from the previous salvo, rising, slow and erect, until their muzzles were pointing at just the right spot in the sky. He saw the gun crews step down and away and put their hands to their ears, all except one man who was clutching a lanyard. He saw the officer raise a whistle to his lips. He saw all of them bow their heads a little and turn half away. He saw the lanyards go suddenly taut, looking as if they had jerked the guns backwards, so instantaneous was the explosion and recoil.

"Flesh, bodies, nerves, legs, brains, arms, intestines, eyes..." He could feel the mass of it, the weight of it, pushing forward, piling up on his defenseless shoulders, overwhelming him with an hallucination of fantastic butchery. A point of something formed in his stomach. Three thousand men. My men. To run the gauntlet of open registered roads with 3000 men. All neatly packed for the slaughter. It's too much for one man to bear. I can't give the order to space out now or they'd know I'm in a funk. They'd know I can't sense it when an officer has the wind up. At any moment... This strain is intolerable. What an awful racket they make. Where the devil are those guides going to meet us? I'd look like a single file with the regiment in single file, all spaced out. Think of it, I can't order the fire-zone intervals yet because it wouldn't look right. What a relief it would be though... Keep up appearances, no matter how many lives it costs. What torture this is, and that foot Vignon striding along as if he's on a boulevard. Good old Vignon! Why can't I have some of his... Three

"Marching, marching, marching. Slowly, as in a dream. Slow march, funeral march..." "The naked road. The hard-surfaced road. The ditch too shallow to shelter even a rabbit from the whizzing, centrifugal metal..." The neat, fatality compact mass on the fatality neat road, so neatly marked on the map. "The neat German captain in his compact dugout. His fatality neat figures, the fatality neat co-ordinates of the naked road..." The lanyards going suddenly taut, looking as if they had jerked the huge guns backwards... "The rush of terrifying sound..." "Two kilometers of compact, living, human, vulnerable flesh behind him. Three thousand men paralyzed in their tracks..." "The blinding flashes of the detonations..." "Whizzing, centrifugal metal..." "Shambles..." "And then smoke, billowing, acrid smoke, settling slowly..." The hallucinations reeled in his head, then fell to pieces as words broke in and shattered them. "Why, it's the moon coming up. I thought it was a searchlight at first. I'd forgotten about the moon. Watch out for that shell-hole!"

"Ah! Thanks, old man, thanks." Even to Vignon, who was not usually given to noticing such things, his chief's tone of intense gratitude and relief seemed all out of proportion to the commonplace service of warning him not to step into a hole—so much so, indeed, that he could not help giving his companion a side glance. Dax, feeling the glance rather than seeing it, decided he'd better pull himself together and create a diversion of some sort.

"Pass the order back to put out pipes and cigarettes, will you, major? Also gas respirators at the alert." His voice sounded quite normal again, he was pleased to note; he was pleased to note, too, that Vignon seemed reassured by its customary tone of decisiveness. "Silly," Dax thought, "but the mere issuing of a command always inspires confidence. It doesn't matter whether it is a necessary command, or even a correct one." Then, a little later, an afterthought came to him: "It inspires self-confidence even in the man who issues it." The regiment tramped on. The moonlight made marching easier, not only because it showed up the irregularities of the road, but also because it brought shapes into being, gave the men something to look at. The exercise itself, too, had begun to make muscles, boots, and straps more limber. The equipment was no longer such a dead refractory weight. It was moving, now that it was alive with some suppleness of its own again, the movement of bodies, arms, and legs. The rhythm of men on the march was gathering uniformity once more.

The order to stop smoking and to adjust their gas masks was a message the men understood well enough. Their understanding of the message was reflected in an almost imperceptible change in the rhythm of their marching. It was not so much that they quickened their pace (which they didn't), as that they tightened it—tightened it, perhaps, in response to an inner visceral contraction which swept, like the order, back over the advancing column. Waves of expectancy, of a kind of nervous expectancy, seemed to fluctuate over those pale, moonlit faces, and the men had a tendency to step on the heels of those ahead of them.

Major Vignon's distant thunderstorm was appreciably nearer now. It seemed to have been brought nearer, in one bound, by the order to stop smoking. The rumble of artillery was no longer a rumble, for it had broken up into its component parts of battery salvos. The Very lights were on the other side of a hill and they still produced their collective rather than their individual effect, an effect no longer quite like sheet lightning, however, because it seemed to die out too slowly.

Col. Dax cursed the moonlight. He knew it was childish of him to do so, but he couldn't help feeling that his regiment must be more visible to the enemy gunners.

The Honesty of States as Way to Peace

By The Rev. J. F. Newton

"TO put it plainly," a thoughtful reader writes, "we do not get down to the tap-root of war in our thinking. We stay on the surface of things, and so long as we do the problem cannot be solved."

"Take the two proposals before us, political disarmament and personal pacifism. Both are noble, but both are negative, not only ineffective but debatable among honest and sincere men."

"To limit the making of arms, to take private profit out of war, would do something; but it is not deep enough. Arms do not make war; the spirit of war makes arms. Men fought before they had modern arms."

"In the same way one respects a man who feels he cannot take part in war, but that does not solve the problem. Even if a whole nation took this attitude, it would simply invite attack and disaster."

"There will be no peace on earth, it seems to me, until we have more justice among men. While men and nations are unjust to each other, it is futile to talk of peace, and in a sense it ought to be."

"The people, if left to themselves in a just world, would not fight. They fight because they are living, or think they are living, under conditions of racial, social or political injustice."

"But why are men and nations unjust? Because our group morality is on a lower level than our best individual morality. We do as a group, large or small, what no good and honest man would do alone."

"In other words, in our group life we are still in the jungle. Until we can bring our group life up to the plane of our finest moral vision, we are going to have war, each war more frightful than the last."

"My reader has put his finger on a plain truth. Until a state is as honest as an honest man, abiding by its covenants, peace will not be secure; and we have a long way to go to reach that level of growth."

"Truly only the sons of God can ever make peace. They alone will have strength enough, patience enough, justice enough, humility enough to fulfill the dream of prophets—but they will do the job finally."

Anyway, he wanted to curse it, and he didn't care how unreasonable he was, Vignon, on the other hand, and most of the rank and file felt quite the other way about it. They welcomed a visibility which would spare them the minor, but none the less exasperating accidents of a relief in pitch darkness.

"Hey there! 181st?" The hail was at the same time a challenge and a question; it came from behind the slow of a burning cigarette in the roadside shadow.

Col. Dax swung round in his stride and shouted "Halt!" Then he added in an even louder voice: "Don't close up. Keep your intervals. Company commanders forward at the double. Pass the word back!" He turned towards the roadside shadow.

"181st, yes. And put that cigarette out." The cigarette dropped to the ground and went out under a boot.

"Guides from the Tirailleurs, to take you in, sir. Lieutenant Trocard speaking."

"All right, Lieutenant, you stay here with me and the headquarters details. Headquarters details, fall out on the right. Fix bayonets. Pass the word back to fix bayonets!"

Print Fabrics The new printed gowns hold the spotlight in both formal and daytime wear. Novel trimming effects use contrasting banding or sometimes harmonize with the predominant color of the print. This effect is often carried out in a two-toned scarf or flowing sash for added glamour.

NOTHING like making your own slip covers—to give you a new appreciation of your chairs! Here's a Cogswell, for example, looking like a million in its print cover with pleated ruffles. (And not a soul the wiser, if there are worn or soiled spots underneath!)

A particular point in making a slip cover for such a chair is to leave an opening at the base and end of each arm—as indicated—in order that the cover may easily be lifted up over the arms.

It's little tips like these that help make our 32-page booklet a perfect treasure! It gives whole lessons (with pictures and diagrams) on making covers for sofas and practically every type of chair.

"WHAT?" asked Willy Nilly. "You're not going to eat with us?"

"You're going back to your General Store when we're about to sit down and stand up to supper?"

"What are you up to, might I ask?" cawed Christopher Crow, cocking his head to one side, and looking closely at Top Notch.

"You can go back and work after you've had your supper," said Willy Nilly. "That's what I'm going to do. Anyway, it's getting late, and you won't be able to work there in the dark. You haven't any light. Why not have supper, a good night's rest, and return to your General Store in the morning?"

"Oh, I could never do that," cawed Top Notch in such a determined, nervous way that they all looked at him even more questioningly than ever. He noticed their looks and added hastily:

"I've just got it in my mind that I'd like to eat in the General Store and attend to one or two matters."

"Then let him have his own way about this," said Willy Nilly. "He doesn't want to eat with us if he doesn't want to do so."

"Oh, but I do," Top Notch blurted.

"Then, why don't you?" asked Willy Nilly.

"Please, please let me take my supper along with me and I'll probably tell you all in a very short time. And may I have an extra supply of supper? My appetite, you might say, is twice as big as usual."

Willy Nilly handed him a basket filled with plenty to eat. Top Notch thanked him, and carried it away.

DAILY MAGAZINE

An Over-Grown Infant
The Daily Short Story
Let's EXPLORE Your MIND
By ALBERT EDWARD WIGGAM, D. Sc.
See Whether His Opinions Agree With Your Own

AUTHOR'S NOTE: These answers are given from the scientific point of view. Science puts the rights of organized society above the rights of individuals.

1. —Most women will expect me to answer this question. "Yes," but most psychologists would not accept such an answer. A woman who has reached the point where she accepts her face at its face value, whether beautiful or homely, and devotes a moderate amount of attention to keeping both face and figure healthy, has attained the only happy, normal mental state for a genuine grown-up, that is, emotional maturity. Psychiatrists find if they ask a woman if she is worried about not being beautiful, nearly all will say they are dreadfully worried about it. A moderate amount of effort by a woman to look beautiful is normal and healthy, but worry about it is emotional adolescence. In a man it is a sign he is not "emotionally weaned."

2. —This is always the first refuge of lazy parents and teachers—they usually ascribe the laziness to the wrong person. Some children do not get their lessons because they are mentally too dull and the lessons are too hard. Others fail because they are too bright and the lessons are too easy. Often a child cannot hear well or see well or has some physical ailment. Always the first aid to a child behind in its lessons should be the doctor, dentist and psychologist.

3. —As a rule you would—I know I would—simply because if I were utterly honest it would be usually something so trivial and useless or else something I would be just a bit ashamed—maybe very much ashamed—for you to know. Try suddenly asking yourself this question and imagine having to answer it to an audience.

Scars of War
By Mary Ellen Russell

THE hall still rang with the last fiery phrase as Allen left the speakers' platform. Once behind the curtain of the stage, his revolting, scarred face twisted with an inner pain and his hands relaxed from their nervous gripping. His body drooped with disillusionment.

Old Daniel was waiting for him in the room back stage. Daniel had waited for him once before, 10 years ago—when a handsome lad had rushed in for high school classes shouting, "Oh, Daniel, I've won the orator's medal!" And once before, five years ago, Daniel had waited for him—when a train, flaunting flags out of every window, had pulled into the station and a man of 22 had stepped down, his face scarred into a caricature of what it once had been.

"All that time," the man was exclaiming now, his shaggy head raised, his trembling hands outstretched, "your voice—it soared—magnificent!"

Allen sagged into a chair, shaking his head slowly, despairingly. You only heard, Daniel. They saw; and they were too repelled to listen.

Daniel's hand dropped onto Allen's shoulder. He tried to keep the cheer in his words, "We'll be leaving Fullerton tomorrow, boy. In New York you'll find lots of things to do."

Allen did not answer. What other things? There could be nothing for him but the speakers' platform—amphitheaters with only the sky to bound his voice; the mob, incensed or calmed by his voice.

His voice! Only his voice—they must overlook—

The next afternoon just before train time Allen received two letters. In one the South Side Woman's Club thanked him for his services on the previous day, and hoped that "the Great Benevolence would erase some of the memories of a turbulent war that had been none too kind."

Allen laughed a little cynically. Women were always ready to pity him; they were generous with their pity.

Then he took up the second letter, addressed also in a feminine hand. He hesitated a moment. Why should he read another? This pity from women—women with their shocked eyes and horrified gasps at the sight of him—he was sick of it. Who wanted to be pitted?

The letter would contain pity, too; they all did. He tore open the flap, half angrily, yet ashamed that he should be angry. As he read, the anger and bitterness in his face gave way to wonder. A girl had attended yesterday's program and had been moved as never before by his words.

Slowly he read her letter again: "Yesterday," she wrote, "your voice held me magnetically while 'you showed me something I had never seen before. What stirring emotion in the very simplicity of your words! What appeal to the heart, what persuasion for the mind! You must indeed be happy in your work, in giving the courage of your own brave spirit to those of us who hesitate and are afraid.'"

Her name was signed: "Joann Garner."

Slowly and with quiet hands he refolded the letter and put it back in its envelope. There was no pity there. Only gratitude, admiration, genuine appreciation. Allen gathered his baggage and waited, still quiet, for Daniel and the cab.

On the train, reading the letter again, the full meaning of Joann Garner's words came home to him. Someone had been so moved by the beauty of his voice that the ugliness of his face had been as nothing. Impulsively Allen turned to Daniel, drowsing beside him.

"I'm going on, Daniel," he said happily. He thrust the letter into Daniel's startled hands and with gleaming eyes watched him as he read. Daniel finished the letter and stared at the signature.

"Do you know her?" Allen asked. "The name seems familiar," Daniel said. Then, as if shaking off a thought, "What do you mean—you're going on?"

"Don't you see what it means, Daniel? People will listen to me. They can be made to forget the scars, the ugliness. New York is going to forget them. My voice will make them forget!"

The years passed. That magic voice that had made Joann Garner forget Allen's scars made others forget them too. He gave to the art of recitation a dignity it had never had before. The richness of Shakespearean cadence became richer when he delivered the most famous lines.

Allen became one of the most famous personalities on the American stage—a one-man show, a virtuoso elocutionist. When the fashionable reviewers reviewed his work they called him "a deuce." What every artist strives after, the dignity of French nomenclature.

The inspiration of that letter from Joann Garner was not ephemeral. Through the days and months and years it was to Allen a sacred thing, quelling his fears, giving him faith in the power of his voice.

He looked forward to the day when he would meet her; she would have aged as her letter had aged—cently into mellowness. "Some day she'll come, Daniel," Allen would say. Daniel only shook his head.

Then came a booking in that town of Fullerton. As Allen was registering at the hotel desk, he heard a voice—Daniel's voice—saying: "What?"

He turned and saw Daniel standing, hat in hand, before a quiet-looking woman of some 30 years. He'd have known, he thought, even without having heard the name called, that it was she.

He walked eagerly to where they stood.

"Introduce me to Miss Garner. Daniel," he said. This was the woman who had not minded his scars. This—

Daniel was mumbling the introduction. Miss Garner's hand groped toward Allen's. He looked at her bewildered. At my scars. This—

"What?" he started to say

THE STRONGEST TEAM—A team of Belgian-Percheron draft horses owned by the George H. Stalter Farms, District, O., set a new world record at Hillsdale, Mich., Sept. 24, 1935, when they pulled a load of 3900 pounds a distance of 27 1/2 feet. The load was placed on a specially built wagon with four dual pneumatic tired wheels, chains over the tires, and all wheels locked. The pull exerted by the Stalter horses is equivalent to hauling 25 1/2 tons on a wagon for 20 consecutive starts on granite block pavement, or drawing nine plows through cornbelt loam cutting 14-inch furrows 6 inches deep.

BIDASSO—The river (whose Spanish name is Vida so) is about 40 miles long, the last 7 miles of which form the frontier between France and Spain. While technically the frontier is in the middle of the river, the two countries have agreed to alternate in the possession of both shores and its valuable oyster beds and fishing rights every 24 hours. Both sides of the river are inhabited by Basques.

Buffet Supper
The buffet supper is probably the most versatile supper because it lends itself to any degree of simplicity or formality. It is also a convenient way in which to serve large groups in limited amounts of space.

Assorted hors d'oeuvres arranged on platters with cocktail balls for holding individual appetizers, en brochette may form one of the most attractive portions of the menu. In a Swedish supper the amazing array of hors d'oeuvres dominates the entire meal. In addition to the appetizers, let the buffet table offer a hot dish, such as a noodle ring filled with creamed chicken, also rolls, dessert and a hot beverage.

A splendid cement for broken china is made by mixing plaster of Paris with the white of an egg until the consistency of a cream. Apply as you would prepared cement.

An Ethiopian Fourth Reader

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

WE'VE been practically going to school on Ethiopia all winter, and have absorbed some very spongy facts about that small-known kingdom.

Its government is a three-piece monarchy with an extra pair of trousers.

All power is vested in the King.

When he pants for authority he just pants on another coat of dignity.

Eggs are only two cents a dozen in Ethiopia. That's one country where you figure a hen wouldn't be safe.

The climate is hot in the summer and cold in the winter. That's a sensible arrangement.

A creditor is chained to the debtor. The fellow who follows Selassie with that green umbrella must have borrowed it once and forgot to return it.

Their courts operate under the Mosaic law of an eye for an eye and a fang for a tusk. We don't know anything about this as we always thought mosaic meant tiles in the bathroom.

When an Abyssinian warrior goes to war his wife goes with him. So he might as well stay home.

During the rainy season it is quite damp. We might say the opposite of the dry season. But why choose up sides on the weather?

Further Part in Hearing
Unless It Sticks to Munitions Industry.

REPLIES TO CHARGE

Denunciation by Democrats

Decided on War Long

A Staff Correspondent of the WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Charging Chairman Nye with attempting to "smear" the name of Woodrow Wilson, two members of the committee, Senators Pope of Idaho and George of Georgia, today renounced any further part in the hearings until it confined itself to the investigation of the munitions industry. Nye is a Republican, Pope and George are Democrats.

Pope read the statement in behalf of himself and George at the open hearing, in the presence of J. P. Morgan and his partners. Pope said: "It appears now that the investigation has degenerated into an attack upon our wartime President Woodrow Wilson, and his Secretary of State, Robert Lansing. . . . I will take no part in such a performance. I am emphatically not interested either in head hunting, or using an instrumentality of the United States Senate to promote the bias, prejudice or animus of any member of the committee."

Nye replied, pointing out that Pope had attended few of the hearings, and George virtually none. In spite of that, he said, every action of the committee had been taken by a majority vote.

The chairman alluded to the attitude of unnamed Senators "when the going gets rough by reason of the toes that must be stepped on by pursuing the avenues which the evidence opens up. He added that he did not purpose to stop at any step "which may help to keep us out of wars such as the last one."

Pope's appearance before the committee occurred almost immediately after Senator Tom Connally, Texas Democrat, had bitterly assailed the committee on the Senate floor for permitting aspersions on Wilson's name. Pope said:

"When the United States Senate authorized an investigation of the munitions industry, I was honored to be named a member of the committee. The objectives outlined in the resolution authorizing the investigation were to inquire into the practices of manufacturers, sellers and distributors of arms, munitions and implements of war, to investigate existing legislation and treaties in the regulation and control of the traffic in munitions and to recommend additional legislation. For many years I felt such an investigation to be desirable and that a thorough-going exposure of the practices of munitions makers is necessary to the future peace of the United States and the world. I most emphatically am in favor of appropriate legislation to control or regulate the munitions traffic."

"During the major part of the committee's inquiry it has conformed to the statutory limits of its jurisdiction and has been of untold value to the people of the United States. It appears now, however, that the investigation has degenerated into an attack upon our wartime President, Woodrow Wilson, and his Secretary of State, Robert Lansing. No word that I can say will add to the greatness of President Wilson, the genuine sincerity of the man, his honesty of purpose, his unusual personal integrity, and his life spending effort in behalf of his native land, but I must express my resentment at any effort to impugn the character of Woodrow Wilson and to discredit his great character."

"Not Head Hunting."

"The chairman of this committee is quoted in the press as making the charge that President Wilson and Secretary Lansing were misled. Just what this has to do with an investigation of the munitions industry under the terms of the resolution it is not possible for me to see. The purpose of the investigation is being lost sight of and the chance to secure enactment of remedial legislation is rapidly disappearing. Such efforts to disparage Wilson and Lansing, however, do disclose the bias and prejudice with which the investigation is being carried on."

"I will take no part in such performance. I am emphatically not interested either in head hunting or using an instrumentality of the
